An anonymous sign painter hung his work on a fence at Brown and Saline sometime Tuesday, stating his opposition to the public housing units destined for the location. A spokesman for the Committee For Equitable Taxation, which is leading the opposition to the housing plan, disavowed its responsibility for the sign and called it the work of a "crank."

Israeli Armored Forces Invade Jordanian Lands

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Israeli armored force crossed into Jordan south of the Dead Sea Tuesday night and remained for nearly 20 hours, striking at Arab guerrilla bases, the Israeli military command reported today.

Jordan said there was a major land and air battle.

The Israelis said their force killed five guerrillas and suffered no casualties or damage. Al Fatah, the guerrilla organization, claimed its men killed two of the raiders and destroyed two Israeli tanks.

It was the longest Israeli penetration of Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Saudi Arabian forces stationed in the area joined Arab guerrillas and Jordanian Army units in battling the Israelis, an Al Fatah communique issued in Damascus said.

A Jordanian spokesman said the Israelis threw in planes, tanks and artillery. Reports to Amman, 100 miles northeast of the battle area said the Israeli force included about 40 tanks and half-tracks backed by heavy artillery.

Israel said the armored raiding force entered Jordan to attack guerrilla bases.

An Israeli spokesman reported five guerrillas had been killed and a number of Arab vehicles damaged in the "combing operation."

No Israeli casualties were reported.

A Jordanian spokesman said the Israelis invaded at 7 p.m. Tuesday after an air raid in which one Jordanian civilian was killed and three others wounded.

The initial Israeli announcement did not disclose the size of the raiding force.

The military command in Tel Aviv said the operation was launched "following repeated attacks from Jordanian territory on the Dead Sea potash works at Sodom and on civilian settlements in the region."

The potash works were (See ISRAELI, Page 4A.)

Heavy Enemy Shellings Plague Southern Cities

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong made their heaviest rocket and mortar attacks in 4½ months Tuesday night, shelling 51 allied bases and towns, the U.S. Command reported today.

The allied commands also reported that their troops and U.S. aircraft killed at least 127 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in half a dozen clashes along the Cambodian and Laotian borders.

About two thirds of the rocket and mortar attacks were in the 3rd Corps area from Saigon 100 miles north to the Cambodian border. About 25 of the attacks caused casualties or damage.

The U.S. Command said two American soldiers were killed and 23 wounded in the shelling. Light damage was reported, including shrapnel hits on some helicopters. Field reports said 16 South Vietnamese soldiers and 15 civilians were wounded.

American targets included the Army's headquarters for Vietnam at Long Binh and the Bien Hoa Air Base, both about 15 miles northeast of Saigon; the headquarters of the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division 36 miles north of Saigon; and two brigade headquarters.

It was the largest number of rocket and mortar attacks since the night of Sept. 4-5, when 74 were reported.

U.S. casualties in the ground fighting were put at two killed and eight wounded, while field reports said five South Vietnamese were killed and 19 wounded.

After one battle near the Bu Dop Special Forces camp, 84 miles north of Saigon, the U.S. Command in Saigon first reported 234 enemy soldiers were killed but later reduced this to 27.

Field reports also said one helicopter crewman was killed and eight American ground troops and another helicopter crewman wounded in the battle. The U.S. Command agreed that one helicopter crewman was killed and another wounded but OWERRI, Nigeria (AP) — The first newsmen allowed inside Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several firsthand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their heads, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

"I've had Lugers stuck in both my ears," he sobbed. "My life has been threatened umpteen times by soldiers wanting to steal my trucks and ambulances. I'm not a doctor. I'm a bloody copper (policeman)."

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own pus and excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he continued. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

The doctor, from Colchester would only give his name as "Doctor Phil." Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort. "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told the newsmen. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'"

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home, many of them lying motionless

Patterson Adjusting The Senate

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate kicked Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, out of his job as president pro tem Tuesday and replaced him with Sen. J.F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville.

Blackwell, who was not present for the end of his tempestuous reign as monarch of the Senate for a year, had survived numerous earlier attempts to oust him. The senator's failure to appear was not explained.

This time majority Democrats with Republican help succeeded in changing the rules to restore Lt. Gov. William S. Morris to the powers Blackwell took over a year ago—the right to preside and to rule on parliamentary questions.

Patterson's first act was to realign three major committees and he said he would have other committee changes to announce soon.

As a first step he appointed Sen. T.D. McNeal, D-St. Louis, to his former job as appropriations chairman. Patterson remains on the committee as vice chairman.

McNeal immediately opened hearings Tuesday night on the emergency appropriations requested by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes so the Senate will be in position to act on the bill when it comes back to work Monday.

The governor did not comment directly on the Blackwell ouster, but he said he thought the Senate had acted "wisely and responsibly."

He praised Patterson as "a widely respected legislator who has performed outstanding service as chairman of the Appropriations Committee and he is an excellent choice for president pro tem."

Hearnes and Blackwell are both Democrats and at one time were political allies. But for the last year they have feuded over the issue of additional revenue to finance the state's operations.

That fight is expected to come to a head at a special referendum vote in April on the income tax bill the governor pushed through a special session last September.

House Gives Nod to Money Bill

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House today passed a $13.6 million emergency money bill, 151-4, and sent it to the Senate where the appropriations committee already is considering major items.

The House session lasted less than 10 minutes despite the fact Rep. Richard Marshall, R-Webster Groves, opposed the bill in what he admitted was a sarcastic approach.

He said now that the Senate has got rid of Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, as its president pro tem, there can hardly be any emergency left to justify the special session.

"Now we can vote against this bill and go home," he said.

Marshall called the measure a "travesty on the people of this state. We have the $7 million available for the public schools right now and it should be put in this measure."

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, in his emergency recommendation, said he would meet the promise of full aid to the schools with an extra state aid allotment in April. The Republiclicans called that a violation of the school law.

Marshall said the state motto should be changed to read:

"A crisis a day will keep the voters away on referendum election day."

A resolution has been introduced in the Senate to move up from November to April 7 the referendum election test of the income tax increase.

State House Adjourns

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House adjourned today until next Tuesday in the hope it can wind up its portion of the special session by Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Rep. Richard J. Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said the Senate would come back to work Monday and should have the appropriation bill ready for possible reconsideration by the House Tuesday.

Transformer In Failure Wednesday

A short in power lines, caused by the blow-up of a transformer at the Missouri Public Service Company's plant on West 16th Street Road, caused electrical failure in much of the city Wednesday morning.

Power was lost for about a half-hour in the eastern part of the city, including Bothwell Hospital. Stand-by generators at the hospital operated automatically, but Don Feeback, hospital administrator, said that a few seconds elapsed before they started. "This is unusual," he commented, "a technician had to pump it for several seconds before it started." He said that battery operated lights were on hand in surgery and the obstetrical rooms.

Bob Johnson, manager of Bell Telephone Co. here, said the system was temporarily overloaded when "everybody picked up his phone to call somebody at the same time during the power failure. This caused everyone to believe even their phones were put out of order," Johnson said.

Some areas south of the city also were affected with the entire city experiencing electrical shortages from a few fluctuations to a complete stoppage of supply for half an hour.

The transformer which exploded was taken off the line by M.P.S.C. and a jumper line rigged around it. A new transformer will be installed, the company said.

County Judges Invite Guests To Tour Jail

Sheriffs and county court judges from 16 counties will tour the new Pettis County jail Feb. 10 when the Central Missouri Counties Judges Association holds its first quarterly meeting of the year.

Pettis County has invited C. R. Burns, a federal jail inspector with the Federal Bureau of Prisons, Springfield, to be the main speaker at the meeting. The judges and sheriffs will meet at Flat Creek Inn for a luncheon.

Presiding Judge Henry Lamm said Wednesday that he had hoped the new jail would be complete before the meeting. In addition to hosting the judges at the meeting, the Pettis County court also invited sheriffs from the other 15 counties in the association to tour the new jail.

The completion date for the jail is now set at the last of February.

E. L. (Red) Birdsong, eastern judge of the county court, is the treasurer of the judges association.

Selective Service Trying For Uniform Callup Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Selective Service System, trying to keep local boards in step, is suggesting they stay within lottery No. 60 in the February draft calls.

For January, a ceiling was proposed at No. 30 in the lottery list.

Official confirmation Tuesday of the February ceiling reversed an official's statement the day before there would be no limit for February—a position which would have allowed local boards to call numbers as high as necessary to meet their quotas.

It remains to be seen how well the guidelines will achieve uniformity; the results of January's effort are not yet known.

But it appeared likely the ceilings will continue to be set, a White House source said, as long as there is the threat of great differences among local boards in the lottery numbers being called.

Many low-numbered men now deferred or exempt are expected to lose that status and become draftable later in the year. But if required to meet monthly quotas as in the past, local boards might have to draft higher numbered men in the absence of those temporarily out of reach.

The White House, Selective Service, and the Pentagon thus decided in December to set yearly, instead of monthly quotas and let local boards that are short of low-numbered men early in the year catch up later as previously exempt persons become available.

A White House source said at least one factor is the need to give pre-induction physical examinations to a new set of men in the transition to the lottery system that took effect last month.

As a legacy of the oldest-first draft, local boards have a backlog of men who passed the physical but do not hold low lottery numbers.

The boards now must process a revised pool of low-numbered men through the physical, and that will take some time.

Once it is done, however, that particular lag should not reappear.

There remains the fact, however, that many low-numbered men will not lose deferments until later in the year—especially college students subject to reclassification after June.

Thus, guidelines might be necessary well into the year.

'Impacted Area' Funds Needed

Residents in the Sedalia school district will be faced with a tax hike if President Nixon successfully vetoes Congress' $19.7 Health, Education and Welfare Department appropriations bill, predicts Dr. T. J. Norris, superintendent of schools.

The school district will lose almost $62,000 in federal funds available through the "impacted areas" education program if the Nixon cutback is effective.

"This money is absolutely necessary for the operation of the system," said Norris. "We would have to have some way to get that money. With state funds also being cut, that would mean a raise in the local tax rate."

The President objects to a $1.26 billion parcel in the bill, earmarked for education and health items, calling them "highly inflationary." If the veto sticks, the administration hopes Congress will offer a new bill excluding the parts Nixon opposes.

The impacted areas program was set up in 1950 to aid districts with large numbers of pupils whose parents live or work on federal property. The proximity of Whiteman Air Force base made the Sedalia district eligible for the funds. There are 425 pupils from Whiteman presently enrolled in the Sedalia school system.

If Congress is unable to override the President's promised veto of the money bill, and the impacted areas program is reduced, then immediate steps would be taken to submit a tax boost referendum to district voters, Norris indicated.

Asked what would happen if voters failed to approve such a tax hike, Norris said, "Then we would be forced to shorten the school year. This money is part of the general fund and is used to pay teachers salaries and support the maintenance of the whole system."

There remains the possibility that Nixon might compromise on the impacted areas issue rather than risk the wrath of the 385 congressmen whose districts qualify for the program.

Ann Landers

Will Marry But Lists Conditions

Dear Ann Landers: I've been going with an attractive bachelor for seven months. He is considered a good catch, but he is 14 years my senior (I am 22) and I'm a little uneasy about a man of his financial status who still lives with his mother.

Last night he said, half-joking, "I'd marry you if you agreed, in writing, to do these five things." I asked, "What are the five things?" He then whipped out a piece of paper and handed me a pencil. Here is the list of requirements.

(1) I will change the bed linen every night.

(2) I will wear makeup to bed — no hair rollers or face cream.

(3) I will get dressed in the morning — no bathrobes or housecoats at breakfast.

(4) If I snore, I agree to have surgery and get the snore fixed.

(5) I will not speak in the morning until I am spoken to.

His requests are not unreasonable, but I resent his attitude. What do you think? — Pie Face

Dear Pie: I think you ought to let his mother keep him for another 36 years.

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend of mine has a daughter who was always sensitive and never got along well with children her own age. Lila kept to herself mostly or tagged along with her mother.

Last year Lila, who was then 15, attached herself to a kind-hearted boy who felt sorry for her. After a while, he saw she was getting too serious and tried to break off with her. Lila kept chasing him and he couldn't escape from her clutches. Now she's gone and got herself pregnant.

The boy is only sixteen and marriage is out of the question. So is support. He doesn't have anything and neither do his folks.

Lila's mother wants her to keep the baby because she thinks it will help her grow up. I've been asked for my advice and want your views. — No Ann Landers

Dear No: It is impossible for a girl to get herself pregnant. She had to have some help. Even though the boy is only 16, he should not be considered an innocent bystander. A lawyer can decide what his legal responsibilities are.

I hope Lila will give the child up for adoption. She sounds unstable and immature. Urge the mother to take the girl to a counselor. Both mother and daughter need professional help.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter brought her college roommate home for the holidays. We don't know much about the girl, except that she comes from a wealthy family. I was annoyed at the way our daughter served her friend breakfast in bed, picked up after her, rinsed out her lingerie and acted like a personal maid.

I feel this shows very poor breeding on the part of the guest. No matter what she is accustomed to at home, she

Conduct Council Business

Among routine business at Monday night's City Council meeting were requests for curbing and guttering at 409 South Montgomery and street lights at 2314 and 2721 South Kentucky.

Another resignation from the police department was accepted, for the same reason that has been plaguing the department for some time: low wages. Patrolman Jerry T. Martin stated in his letter of resignation that he could no longer support his family on his wages.

The proposed new fire station on West 16th Street came under consideration again, and the Buildings and Grounds Committee, headed by councilman Larry Englund, was directed to contact Simons and Buller, architects, to draw up plans so that bids can be requested on the cost of construction. Mayor Walker said that this is not a firm commitment because the council doesn't know how the new mayor and council to be elected in the spring will feel about the new station.

Renewal liquor licenses were approved for Katz Drug Store, the Holiday Inn and Whitaker and Co.

Departmental bills approved for payment were: general and administrative, $740.10; airport, $99.39; fire, $539.40; police, $1,895.30; street and alley, $1,232.31; sanitation, $517.62; sewer, $3,985.82; public buildings and grounds, $2,561.54; industrial development, $352.67; lights and water, $6,674.52; parking, $103.21, for a total, plus bond accounts, of $33,916.38.

shouldn't expect her hostess to wait on her. I think Miss Social Register has a lot to learn. Do you agree? — Disgusted Mom

Dear Mom: Never mind about Miss Social Register, concern yourself instead with your daughter's role in this little vignette. Why does she behave like a handmaiden? Where is her dignity and self-esteem? True, the guest should not have used her so badly, but the real problem here is your daughter's doormat tendencies.

Scouting Jamboree Recalled

Joe Wright spoke at the Noon Optimist Club Tuesday and with the aid of slides presented a picture of the National Boy Scout Jamboree held in Idaho this past year.

Thirty seven boys were taken from this area in a school bus with a Parkhurst truck, loaned for the trip by the company, along with some Scoutmasters.

Perhaps the most heart warming picture was that of a Boy Scout doing his good deed. When an elderly couple had tire trouble and the man came up to ask if they knew where he could get someone to change the tire, Aaron Keane immediately volunteered and did the job.

There were approximately 33,000 Scouts at the Jamboree from all over the United States and about a dozen other countries. Nineteen camps were set up with 1,700 boys to a camp, with the boys doing all the cooking.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. C. D. Payne, program chairman.

W. A. Ball, president, presided over the meeting, with Lee Deason giving the invocation.

Trooper Curt Mathews was introduced as a guest of Trooper Charles Pieper.

Record Breaking Freight Train Run is Today

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The longest regularly scheduled freight train run in history begins daily service Wednesday— from Florida to the Pacific Northwest, a distance of 3,211 miles.

The new service was announced in Omaha Tuesday by the Union Pacific, Seaboard Coast Line and St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railroads.

The route takes it from Jacksonville, through Birmingham, Ala., Memphis, Tenn., Kansas City, Mo., North Platte, Neb., Pocatello, Idaho, Portland, Ore., and on to Seattle.

A breakaway section of the train will head west from North Platte to California points.

Named the "Coast-to-Coast Express," CCX in railroad jargon, the new train pools locomotives among the three railroads.

The railroads said the train will bypass most classification yards and stop only for inspections, crew changes and icing of perishable commodities.

UP engines will go through to Jacksonville, Fla., while Frisco and Seaboard locomotives will go as far west as North Platte.

Operated experimentally since Dec. 1, 1969, CCX goes on official timetables Wednesday.

Traffic Mishaps Up in '69

Traffic accidents inside the Sedalia city limits increased more than 10 per cent last year over the total recorded in 1968, according to a traffic department report issued to the City Council by Police Chief William Miller.

There were 951 accidents in the city last year, compared to 859 in 1968. However, injuries and fatalities were down.

There were 171 accidents involving 257 injured persons last year, compared to 181 injury accidents in 1968 involving 262 persons. These figures have steadily declined since 1967, when there were 197 accidents involving injuries to 284 persons.

Fatalities have decreased one each year since 1967 to the present three recorded for 1969. There have been no motorcycle fatalities in the past two years. Auto-bicycle accidents have decreased from 31 in 1967, to 28 in 1969, to only six last year.

Police records indicated that 71 accidents involved drinking drivers in both 1968 and 1969, however police apprehended 131 drunken drivers last year before they became involved in accidents and 127 in 1968.

St. Louis Plant Reports Earnings

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Diversified Industries, Inc. of St. Louis reported Tuesday that fourth quarter earnings were $1,883,000 compared with $1,314,000 in the comparable 1968 period. Earnings per share increased to 36 cents from 29 cents.

Earnings for the year ended Oct. 31, however, declined to $8,148,000 in 1969 against $9,926,000 in 1968, or $1.56 per share against $2.05.

The firm said the comparative per share figures include earnings of Dataron Processing, Inc., up to Sept. 10, 1969, when Dataron stock was distributed to Diversified stockholders.

Q — What can be done about a flood light on a business building that shines directly in the eyes of motorists at night? The light in question is mounted on the east side of Fitzwilliam Motors and shines in the eyes of westbound motorists approaching the intersection of Main and Missouri.

A — The Democrat contacted R. A. Fitzwilliam, owner, and he said the situation would be corrected as soon as possible.

Q — Is the fire chief's car owned by the city, and if so who pays for the upkeep on it? — F.B.

A — City employees such as the fire and police chiefs, their assistant chiefs, the poundmaster, building inspector and city engineer use their cars in their work. City Clerk Ralph Dedrick said the city pays them a car allowance for using their vehicles while on city business.

For the police and fire chiefs, it is $75 per month and $50 for their assistants.

Any city employee who is required to use his car in his job is paid a car allowance.

Dedrick also said that all upkeep, insurance and gas expenses incurred are paid for by the individual, with the car allowances to help defray the expenses incurred on the job. Insurance rates for vehicles used on the job usually run higher than for normal passenger cars, Dedrick added.

Q — How will the December gas bills be figured? A rate increase went into effect Dec. 23, and meters are usually read on the 10th of the month — C.W.

A — To figure gas bills for last month, M.P.S.C. says it took an average of the amount of gas used each day during December and figured the increase into the bills on those days after Dec. 23 on a pro-rated basis.

If it is necessary to cut back the rate increase or if customers are charged too much, M.P.S.C. will pass refunds back to its customers as has been done several times in the past, the company added.

Charges Nixon With Decision

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Defense counsel says Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was charged with murder at My Lai because of "command control" by President Nixon.

The military judge hearing motions in Calley's case said he would consider this aspect Feb. 9. Preliminary defense hearings were continued Tuesday until that date.

Calley's attorneys are asking dismissal of charges against him in the alleged killing of 102 Vietnamese civilians.

"The issue is command control," says George Latimer of Salt Lake City, Utah, Calley's chief defender. Latimer contends that Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, with Nixon's approval, is exercising command influence on the case.

The military judge, Lt. Col. Reid W. Kennedy, said he would consider whether subpoenas should be issued for Laird, Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor and Army Chief of Staff Gen. William Westmoreland.

The defense contends that these men exerted command influence, resulting in the murder charges against Calley.

The Supreme Court has thrown out past court-martial convictions because of command influence.

Calley, 26, of Miami, Fla., was originally charged in the slaying of 109 Vietnamese civilians. But, Kennedy eliminated two specifications, reducing the total to 102.

Latimer told the judge that nobody at Ft. Benning knew anything about the My Lai incident until they were ordered to charge Calley with murder.

Pill Debate Continues In Capitol

WASHINGTON AP — A trial of doctors continued the medical onslaught against oral contraceptives today with more congressional testimony about suspected links between the pill and high blood pressure, strokes and fatal blood clotting.

Although none produced any hard new evidence of danger in their prepared testimony before the Senate monopoly subcommittee, all three urged caution in the use of the pill.

And one called for government support of massive research on the issue.

"Research from these drugs was far from complete at the time they were released for public use," said Dr. J. Edwin Wood, director of the Department of Medicine at Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia.

The subcommittee, chaired by Democrat Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, resumed hearings today after two days of testimony last week when seven researchers cited suspected links between the pill and a wide variety of ailments including cancer of the breast, cervix and uterus.

Appearing with Wood were Dr. John Laragh of Columbia University and Dr. David B. Clark of the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Laragh said the pill was suspected of causing serious hypertension in "certain rare but especially susceptible individuals."

Clark, a neurologist, said "There is reason to believe that women with hypertension or with a previous history of occlusive disorders of blood vessels are more at risk."

Wood, in the strongest indictment of the day against the pill, said "there is a minimum but definite hazard to life while using these drugs because of the side effect of blood clotting."

who died Sunday at Bothwell Hospital, were held at 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Green Ridge Baptist Church, with the Rev. Kenneth Roller officiating.

Icy Plunge Saves Life

WILLINGBORO, N.J. (AP) — "The water was cold, but there was nothing else to do. It really wasn't very special," Mrs. May Gabrielleon shrugged after she plunged into an icy creek to save a small boy.

Mrs. Gabrielleon leaped into the six-foot deep creek near here and rescued David Borman, 6, who had fallen through the ice.

"Now in the movies, there is always a long stick or something right there on the bank, but there wasn't," the housewife said.

New Expansion Is Announced

CALIFORNIA — Chamber of Commerce President Wayne Woodard has announced that the California Manufacturing Co. will build a new plant to facilitate the expansion of their cutting room operation.

Plans for the new 70,000 - square-foot building, which will be financed through revenue bonds, recently were approved by the city council at a special meeting. The site for the new plant lies east of the cemetery on U.S. 50.

James Lowe, manager of the local company, reported that 50 people would be hired to run the new operation, with more being added as the output increases.

The existing plant has its own cutting operation, but finished products are shipped to St. Louis and from there trucked to the buyers. When the new plant begins operation, it will be possible to ship the garments directly from California, thus saving both time and cost of operation.

Some 35 American B52 bombers flew heavy raids during the night against a North Vietnamese buildup reported near the Ben Het Special Forces camp, on the Cambodian border 275 miles northeast of Saigon.

In Saigon, a terrorist bomb exploded late Tuesday in a movie theater directly below a U.S. enlisted men's billet, forcing the evacuation of the billet while bomb disposal teams checked for other bombs in the theater, which was unoccupied at the time of the blast. Nearly 60 Americans were in the billet, but no one was hurt.

The result was a $13.6 million bill with a treasury cushion close to $10 million to ward off any trouble if an economic recession should develop.

In debate the House rejected efforts to:

Put back the $7.3 million for the prison on the theory that aiding public schools was more immediately important. Instead the bill calls for $60,000 additional for guard salaries so a larger force can keep tighter control over hard core criminals.

Refused to add $7.5 million for state aid to public schools on the promise of the governor that he would see the schools get their full statutory aid this school year.

Rejected a move to give the Water Pollution Board almost $6 million as state aid for local water pollution control programs. Opponents said the treasury just couldn't stand that amount at this time.

The rest of the changes were minor but may be ironed out in House-Senate conference sometime next week.

Topless Dancer Goes to Court

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit go-go bar owner has filed a suit charging his girl dancers are suffering discrimination since they cannot legally dance topless, but male dancers can.

The federal suit brought Monday alleges the ordinances used to arrest the dancer and owners are unconstitutional because the laws "deny the constitutional and civil rights to grant, seek, obtain and hold employment as entertainers without regard to sex."

Report Nixon Seeking Pollution Budget Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is expected to propose a "small budget" approach of user taxes, research and tax incentives to combat pollution — a program already drawing fire from Democrats and Republicans who demand more drastic action.

High administration sources disclosed Tuesday Nixon's State of the Union message Thursday will include the taxes and research proposals rather than expanded government spending and enforcement authority to clean up the environment.

As outlined by the sources, Nixon's program will fall considerably short of the federal initiatives, money and enforcement being suggested by some Congress members.

Officials said Nixon's "small budget" approach is expected to apply to efforts to stop air pollution and solve the problems of solid waste disposal. Some new federal funds may be asked to battle water pollution.

They said more research is needed "because we really don't know what pollution control equipment works yet." Tax credits would be aimed at stimulating industry's own action as against pollution, and user taxes would be proposed to help pay for clean-up.

Even as word of Nixon's program was emerging Tuesday, a bipartisan group of House members already was at work pushing a program running counter to the administration.

They sent letters to fellow congressmen urging appropriation of $1.25 billion in the next fiscal year to help build waste treatment facilities. The six representatives said a 1966 antipollution program deserves full funding and: "To do otherwise is to invite catastrophe."

Such funding was opposed last September by Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch who said federal outlays from general revenues for solid waste disposal facilities amount to subsidies for the polluter.

Finch figured in another major development on the environmental front Tuesday when he and Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe announced 31 major airlines had agreed to make modifications on jet engines by 1972 to cut down on air pollution.

Representatives of the major domestic carriers said their companies would fit a redesigned combustor—or burner can—to 3,000 of their commercial jet engines which reportedly account for 70 per cent of all smoke pollution from the airliners.

shelled Monday night. Israelis said the shelling attacks came from the village of Safi, a target of Tuesday night's raid. It is 2 1/2 miles inside Jordan.

This same area of Jordan was hit last May 21 by an Israeli motorized force which crossed the cease-fire line to destroy an Arab guerrilla base. That raid lasted almost eight hours.

In Northern Israel, meanwhile, informed sources in Tiberias said guerrillas in Jordan fired mortars and bazookas at four Israeli army outposts along the Jordan River in the Beisan Valley.

FDA Tells Doctors to Release Pill Complications

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has told doctors they should explain the risks of high blood pressure, liver damage, diabetes and cancer to women taking oral contraceptive pills even though the agency has no definite proof of any such link.

The FDA also announced Monday manufacturers will be required to strengthen the label warnings about a link between the pill and blood clots.

Meanwhile, the producers of a low-hormone "minipill" oral contraceptive announced it has halted testing with humans because the drug had produced tumors in dogs. The much-heralded pill has been tested up to two years on some 3,000 U.S. women and has been in use in France, Mexico and Britain.

Syntex Laboratories Inc. of

Palo Alto, Calif., announced the decision, which comes as a blow to U.S. pill researchers. The firm said some tumors in the dogs were cancerous, some were pre-cancerous and some benign. The firm said no cancer had been found in women taking part in the tests. It said tests will continue with dogs and monkeys.

The FDA, in suggesting fuller discussion with patients of the risks of oral contraceptive pills, sent letters to 381,000 physicians, hospital pharmacists and hospital administrators. The letter pointed to a recent British study that found clotting linked particularly to oral contraceptives with high estrogen content.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said women should be made fully aware of the risks "thus permitting the participation of the patient in the assessment of the risk associated with this method" of oral contraception.

In strengthening the labeling regulation, the agency is acting on the findings of an FDA advisory committee which said a link between all oral contraceptives and certain blood clot disorders is now proven. Previously the labels were required only to mention that one study indicated a clot link.

National concern—and controversy—over the pill has snowballed since last week when senators began hearing testimony on possible dangers of the oral contraceptives.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, rejecting criticism that his hearings into birth control pills have created an unwarranted scare, said Monday his probe has spotlighted an "honest dispute" among medical men.

The hearings produced much testimony that the pill is suspected of causing or contributing to a wide variety of ailments, including cancer of the breast, cervix and uterus.

None of the expert medical witnesses reported any hard evidence against the pill, however.

The hearings resume for three days Wednesday and are expected to continue off and on for several months.

Nelson commented after a weekend survey by the Associated Press indicated two days of testimony on potential hazards of the pill last week before his monopoly subcommittee created a wave of alarmed calls by women to their doctors.

In Augusta, Ga., a doctor whose research led to the development of the pill charged the congressional hearings are politically motivated and misleading.

Dr. Robert B. Greenblatt, 64, chairman of the endocrinology department of the medical college of Georgia, said six of the eight experts called to testify before Nelson's subcommittee are against the pill.

"Why don't they invite some of us who are for the pill? The great silent majority isn't being heard from in this case," he said. Greenblatt didn't elaborate on his political motivation charge.

The lineup of witnesses this week includes specialists who will testify on suspected links between the pill and blood clots, high blood pressure, metabolic changes, diabetes and liver damage.

The subcommittee also will present expert testimony from at least one researcher flatly denying the pill causes any of these things.

Labor Secretary Predicts Program

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz says a national training program of wide scope for a segment of the construction industry will be announced soon.

The Department of Labor is assisting "a national construction association and a major craft union in developing a national journeyman trainee contract," Shultz said Monday.

"This program will produce a major breakthrough" in job opportunities in the construction industry, he told directors of the National Association of Home Builders.

Shultz said he thought his department would release the information Sunday.

Can Pay Taxes.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Most of the three million BankAmericard holders in California now can use their credit card accounts for paying federal and state income taxes.

Special checks, being mailed this week, will be good for amounts up to $500, but a cardholder must obtain telephone authorization from BankAmericard for amounts over $100 before sending the check directly to the appropriate tax collector, a Bank of America spokesman said Monday.

The card holder will be charged a 4 per cent onetime fee for the tax loan, the bank said. If he chooses to extend his repayment, the regular 1½ per cent monthly finance charge of the credit card will apply.

FTC Finds Deception In Specials

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a housewife goes to market she often finds the food specials cost more than advertised or may not be there at all, the Federal Trade Commission says.

The FTC investigation last summer of 137 stores belonging to 10 food chains in San Francisco and Washington showed a "total of 11 per cent of the advertised items in the two cities were found to be unavailable, and only eight of the 137 stores checked had every advertised item available."

The findings were released as the FTC opened hearings today on an proposed commission rule to require food markets to specifically state in their advertising what stores have the bargains, and that specials go at the advertised price or below.

Supporters of the rule and consumer groups were scheduled for the early part of the hearings. The chains and their trade associations will appear in a March session.

The FTC report further said the shortage of bargains was more acute in low-income or ghetto areas.

On pricing, the FTC found 8 to 9 per cent of the items mispriced compared to the ads, and:

"In a very substantial majority of the instances of deviations, the prices marked on the items were higher than the advertised prices."

An additional study of 154 Washington and Baltimore markets of nine chains turned up similar findings, the FTC said.

If the rule is adopted violators would be liable for legal action with the court determining the penalty.

The FTC said it would not allow general disclaimers in the new advertising such as "Not all items available at all stores."

It was noted by the commission that families could benefit by genuine food specials to the tune of 10 per cent off their total food bills.

Delivery Problems

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Two ambulances, six taxicabs and a delivery boy for a pizza restaurant showed up at intervals Monday at a woman's home.

The woman, not identified, complained to police that she had ordered none of the services.

She added: "Who could eat a pizza at 10 o'clock in the morning."

Danish Ballet Troupe Strives for Weightless Appearance

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — (NEA) — Film taken by the Apollo astronauts in orbit is being studied carefully by Flemming Flindt, Denmark's leading dancer-choreographer, who is creating the world's first space ballet for the Royal Danish Ballet Company.

"My big problem is how to make the dancers appear weightless and as though they are floating in space," explains Flindt, who is ballet master of the company. "This is where the film taken by Buzz Aldrin and the other astronauts of the Apollo program has proved useful."

"We have asked an engineer to design a special floor, which will act as a sort of trampoline to give the dancers buoyancy. But we don't know yet whether it will give the desired effect of the dancers being freed from the pull of gravity. Also, we are experimenting with special mirror effects, which may give the illusion of weightlessness."

The space ballet is based on the story of Faust, here renamed Felix Luna, who sells his soul to the devil in a vain search for happiness. In its modern dance version, the story will hint at the moral that scientific progress does not necessarily bring happiness to man, in this case to Felix, as he travels through interplanetary space in pursuit of it.

Flindt, staging his 10th ballet since he became ballet master in 1963, admits that the moral implications are what have made the subject attractive to him.

Founded nearly 200 years ago, the Royal Danish Ballet ranks with the Russian Bolshoi and the American Ballet Theater among the world's top companies. In its tours of America in 1957, 1960 and again in 1965, the Danish company was acclaimed from coast to coast. Here in Denmark, it recently won new fans by enlarging its repertoire to include modern works as well as classical ballets.

Flindt, who works a 14-hour day, is difficult to locate. I finally managed to corner him in a shopping center on the outskirts of Copenhagen, where the Royal Danish Ballet was giving a free matinee performance for hundreds of school children. The work chosen was "The Swan Lake," based on a fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen, and it seemed to delight its audience, judging by the squeals.

"This is part of our policy of bringing ballet to the people," Flindt explained. "Our children's matinees have been so popular, in fact, that we have had to stop advertising them."

"It's because of the fire regulations. We have a terrible time keeping the aisles free of kids, so that the audience could be evacuated quickly in case of fire."

Television has also helped to win a whole new audience for ballet, with Flindt being invited to stage such elaborate productions as Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring" on the small screen.

As a result of the newly-awakened interest in dance, the Royal Danish Ballet has extended its season to nine months in the year, starting in September, giving five performances a week, which is a record for a company of its reputation.

Another indication of popularity is that there are now 20 applicants for every vacancy at the Royal Theatre's ballet school. Those applicants lucky enough to be accepted are given tuition free of charge from the age of 7 to 16. The school, whose enrollment is now limited to 65 pupils, is soon to be expanded to 150 and to have its own buildings near the opera house here in Copenhagen.

Denmark owes its long dance tradition to a genius without a drop of Danish blood in his veins. He was August Bournonville, the son of a French father and a Swedish mother, who created over 50 ballets in Copenhagen between the years 1829 and 1976.

The Bournonville ballets, the most famous of which are "Napoli" and "La Sylphide," are noted for the equal prominence which they give to male and female dancers. Indeed, the hallmark of the Royal Danish Ballet is the virile dancing of its male soloists.

The Bournonville ballets are still big hits, whenever the Danish company tours America, but at the moment ballet master Flindt has his eyes firmly fixed on astronaut Neil Armstrong and company as the inspiration of his newest work.

When left at the Copenhagen shopping center, Flindt was still muttering about weightlessness and the relative merits of trampolines and trick mirrors to achieve the desired effect.

The custom of sending Valentine Day missives began about 1400.

Toads are distinguished from frogs by having no teeth.

Washington PTA Meets in January

"Happiness is a New Year," was the program theme at the Jan. 15 meeting of the Washington School PTA. Girl Scout Troop 358 and Brownie Troop 358 presented the program.

Mrs. Lloyd Flippen conducted the meeting and Mrs. Don Carver gave the devotion.

The parent and family life class at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 29 in the school cafeteria was noted. Mrs. Rita Burns is chairman of that group. Members were also reminded of the 7:30 p.m. Founder's Day program Feb. 19 at the school.

Bartender Has His Own Transatlantic Fame from London Pub

(Second of Three Articles.)
By TOM CULLEN
LONDON — (NEA) — If his American admirers had anything to do with it, Joe Gilmore head bartender at the Savoy Hotel, would be made British ambassador to the United States.

Certainly his qualifications are impressive. For one thing, Joe, who was born in Belfast, has probably nursed more Americans through hangovers than most British ambassadors meet sober in a lifetime. He gets over 400 Christmas cards a year from grateful transatlantic customers.

For another, Joe is the soul of discretion. During private wartime gatherings he mixed drinks for such big-wigs as Winston Churchill and Dwight Eisenhower at their most unguarded. Whatever secrets he may have gleaned from their conversations will remain safe with him to the grave.

Then, too, the Irish barman has a filing-cabinet memory. He has Bing Crosby's customary Scotch and soda waiting for him when the Hollywood star arrives, remembers that Liz Taylor prefers Jack Daniels sour mash whisky and how Frank Sinatra likes his martini.

But Joe harbors no secret ambition to wear the striped pants of the British diplomat.

He is content to be the best barman in London.

This year Joe will celebrate his 30th year with the Savoy, which was the first hotel in Europe to open an American bar, and hence the first to popularize the American cocktail.

The Savoy thinks so highly of Joe that not long ago it sent him on a refresher course to the United States, a month's "bar crawl," as he describes it, to learn what is new in the world of mixology.

"About the only thing new I learned was from the barman at the St. Regis, who taught me how to make a mint julep in ten minutes flat," Joe recalls. "It used to take me twenty minutes, by which time the client would be panting."

Joe has read up on the history of the Savoy, and during a slack afternoon likes to astound friends with such powers as, "Did you know that the Savoy was the first hotel in Britain to have electricity, and the first to install elevators?"

It was also the first hotel to have a bathroom with every suite of rooms, an unheard of luxury in 1889 when the Savoy first opened its doors. (The Victoria Hotel built at the same time had only four bathrooms for 500 guests.)

The Savoy was built by Richard D'Oyly Carte, the first producer of Gilbert and Sullivan operas, who shrewdly set his sights for wealthy Americans then beginning to travel to Europe.

To run his establishment D'Oyly Carte hired two men whose names have since become legend: Cesar Ritz, founder of the Ritz Hotel in Paris, and Auguste Escoffier, who is probably the greatest chef of all time.

Other celebrities have been associated with the Savoy. Johann Strauss was engaged to conduct Viennese waltzes in its restaurant, while Anna Pavlova once danced there in cabaret. Marconi made his historic experiments in a soundproofed room. In another suite Sarah Bernhardt almost died from an overdose of sleeping powders.

All of this, of course, was before Joe Gilmore's time, but he remembers vividly the war years and particularly the night of April 16, 1941, when a land mine fell outside the Savoy.

"It blew out every window on the river side of the hotel," Joe recalls. "Many of the guests were bleeding from cuts and wounds, but we were well organized to cope."

"Some of the hotel staff had had first aid training, while others were air raid wardens. Every night during the blitz the roof was fully manned by fire watchers on the alert for incendiaries. The hotel's proximity to Waterloo station made it a prime target."

Joe remembers seeing Ed Murrow lying prone on the sidewalk outside the Savoy so that his microphone could pick up the actual thump of German bombs for his countrymen across the Atlantic. He remembers seeing Quentin Reynolds on the roof weeping as he beheld London gutted by fire.

The ranks of the Americans who made the Savoy bar their home during the war have now thinned out, as has the hair on top of Joe's head. But the hotel itself, still maintains close ties with the States.

The Pilgrim Dinners to further Anglo-American relations are still held in the Abraham Lincoln Room, as are the monthly luncheons of the American Chamber of Commerce and the American Correspondents' Association.

Joe Gilmore has done his bit to cement transatlantic friendship recently by inventing a Nixon cocktail (Bourbon, gin peach bitters) and a Moonwalk Special (grapefruit juice, Grand Marnier and champagne).

As Joe celebrates his 30th year at the Savoy, a host of American friends will be toasting him and wishing him 30 years more behind the bar.

Crossroads Comment...

Seventeen years ago we wrote a piece for Crossroads Comment but left it to accumulate unused with many other items in a desk drawer.

The paper, yellowed with age, still bears a message apropos to the times and of course personally relevant because of some modifications of responsibility here at the office.

So, after 17 years, let us produce it at last for whatever benefit it may have to others since we are in agreement with its verbal content:

Passing of Knowledge From Old to Young. As men and women grow older they should cultivate the graceful capability of permitting others, younger than themselves, to assume the burdens of executive responsibility. Thus the young attain dexterity and initiative, yet in the process respect their elders for the latter's wise and tactful self-effacement.

Often older persons dread to relinquish authoritative control lest it weaken their image. But this need not be so if the manner of adaptation is such that the youngsters know their tenure is based on successful accomplishment.

Once the transition of knowledge from old to young is accomplished, elders become mentally rejuvenated in release from detail, the effects of which are like unto exchanging a long worn, tight-fitting size 15½ shirt for a new one with an easy-breathing 16 collar.

—O—

Delay in delivery of first class mail is becoming more habitual and in many instances has caused concern in business circles. A recent instance was the delayed arrival of a bid to the Board of Education the results of which cost the taxpayers approximately $2,000 more than it should have.

Yet another was related to three-day delivery of first class mail from Chicago of material arriving too late for publication on release dates. The sender shifted to New York and the copy comes through sooner.

Business deals of some consequences have sometimes teetered on the edge of confirmation because of consultative advice being delayed in the mails.

Which brings us to agreement with Former United States Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien's comment: "Political involvement in postal operations has made the postal service virtually unmanageable."

We wonder what Senators Symington, Eagleton and Congressman Randall think about all this nonsense.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senator Used Convict as Handyman

WASHINGTON — Sen. Herman Talmadge's use of convict labor in his gracious Washington home, it has now leaked out, came a cropper when narcotics agents picked up the murderer-houseboy on a heroin count.

The effort in rehabilitation by the Georgia Democrat and his wife was hidden away in a confidential narcotics file.

It discloses that Washington narcotics officers "arrested Raymond Davidson, Negro male, 26, for Uniform Narcotic Drug Act," and adds that "Senator Herman Talmadge of Ga. and his wife arrived in the office in regards to Davidson who is employed by them as a houseboy."

The document is signed by Det. Sgt. David Paul, now retired, who was reached by this column and under questioning confirmed the strange case. Mrs. Talmadge, reached in Ashburn, Ga., provided other details.

Carl Mills, a long-time friend and Georgia prison official, approached the Talmadges about taking a chance on a young prisoner soon coming up for a parole hearing. Since the Talmadges had lost their family servant to cancer, and were suffering from the Washington maid shortage, they took the chance, even though Davidson was under life sentence for killing a man in a crap game.

Davidson began to work for the Talmadges as chauffeur, houseboy, sometime-cook and handyman, living in a room in their basement.

At the time of his arrest, he told Sgt. Paul he got "walking around money." Mrs. Talmadge said Davidson got $50 a week plus room and board.

Davidson was a good worker, and the Talmadges grew fond of him. The odd household of Southern Senator, his petite lady, and a murderer with his last chance to reform, seemed to be going well.

The Talmadges didn't ask what he did with his nights.

—Caught with Junkies—

"At 7:00 p.m., Aug. 9, 1967," the confidential police document picks up the story, the detectives "cruised the area of 18th and Columbia Road." It was near there, in an alley well-known to Paul and his agents that they found four familiar junkies and Davidson.

Davidson, they reported, flung away a

Impact of College Grads Exaggerated

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Though the nation's college campuses have been far quieter this year than last, a hangover notion persists from 1968-69 that college-educated Americans soon will dominate this country numerically and perhaps in many other ways.

It is not going to happen in terms of numbers. The college-educated may surely play disproportionately large roles in managing U.S. society—but it can be argued that they do this now.

The estimates for the immediate future, up to 1985, may contain some surprises for self-centered college youngsters who imagine they are soon going to swamp out everybody else.

A study made for the Urban Affairs Council went beyond the college age to more broadly defined youth—all those Americans 14 to 25. There are presently some 39 million in this category, about twice as many as were in the bracket in 1960.

By 1985, the survey forecasts, this population age group is expected to reach 46 million. The gain sounds impressive, but the evidence is that most other age groups will also be growing substantially in that 15-year span.

The significant figure is a percentage calculation. Despite a predicted 7-million gain in numbers in the 14-25 age sector, the proportion of such youth to the total population will remain where it is now and has long been—around 20 per cent.

This column often before has scotched the idea that the U.S. population is growing steadily younger. For a time, some politicians were saying the median age was 25 years. It was not. It was always higher. Today it is about 27.8 years, and by 1985 it will be over 28.

As for strictly college youth, though the numbers initially enrolling have risen spectacularly to around seven million this fall (three times the total 20 years ago), the proportion of college graduates to the total population is not all that startling and apparently is not going to be.

Today, some 11 per cent of Americans are graduates from a four-year college course. By 1985, notwithstanding the prospect of higher youth numbers and still higher basic college enrollment, the percentage of college graduates in America probably will be only 14 per cent.

That hardly makes for prospective numerical dominance by the college-educated, defining that as persons with a full college education.

There may be a good deal higher proportion of people with limited college schooling. But numerical domination ultimately will go to those in this country who are graduates of our high schools. Right now more than three-fourths of the nation's young do graduate at this level, and about 94 per cent of the high school age group—14 to 17—is enrolled in secondary schools.

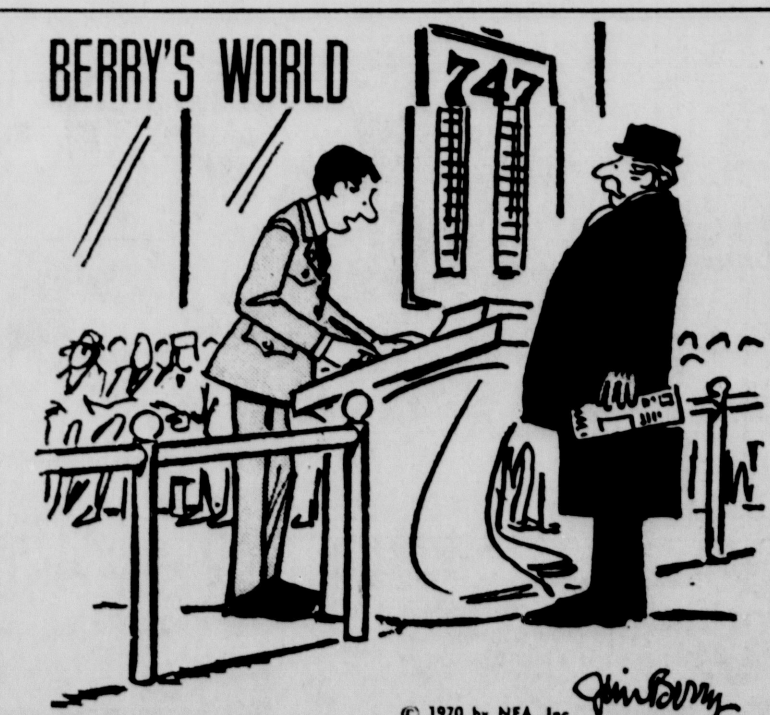

As indicated earlier, the fully college-educated have a high potential for taking commanding roles in society. Not surprisingly, the survey for the Urban Affairs Council shows that in today's college population, there is heavy over-representation (in terms of their real percentage in the total population) of youngsters from white, middle class, well-to-do and relatively well-educated families.

But, by 1985, clearly, these Americans and others to follow them still will be heavily out-voted by the far greater millions whose schooling record shows high school graduation or less.

Their dominance will be significant when set against the exaggerated expectations of college-educated numbers stirred by the turbulence of the present campus era.

It is also an impressive prospect, for as recently as 1949 fewer youngsters were enrolled in U.S. high schools (six million) than now enroll in our colleges.

But we need to gauge all this quantitative expansion carefully. It is no automatic guarantee of a better-educated America. Serious questions exist about the quality of U.S. schooling at most levels, and President Nixon himself is among those most deeply concerned.

Fine Art of Listening

By BETTY CANARY

Paul Tillich has said that to love is to listen. I keep the quotation on my kitchen bulletin board as a reminder.

Not that I like everything I hear around this house. Some of the noises offend me, some amaze me. But, I don't believe this is the kind of listening Tillich meant.

It is not always easy to remember. "To love is to listen," when a small child is squirmingly anxious to tell me the latest fourth-grade news as I put together a cake. It is so easy to say, "Ummmmmm. Now, would you please wait until I've finished measuring this stuff?" It's even easier to stall him with, "Have you hung up your coat?" or "Look at your boots — on the floor again!"

But, if I fend him off until the "right" time, the time may never come.

We sit down together when the children come in from school. And, almost every day there is time for a snack and a quick once-over of papers and some talk. But love and listening cannot be scheduled and rationed. If a boy's best friend socked him in the eye, he usually doesn't want to talk about it while his sisters are in the room. If a girl wants to complain that everybody in the world except her has their ears pierced, chances are she won't bring it up in front of brothers.

Yet it is so easy to put off our listening. And, usually, it seems so sensible. "Not now, dear, later." "Can't you see I'm busy?" "Run on and play, honey, and we'll talk after dinner."

After dinner he has homework and her favorite television show is on and then you'll get a telephone call that goes on forever. The time to listen is NOW.

Sometimes to love means listening to what someone is NOT saying, to hear with an inner ear, perhaps the heart. To realize that, given an opportunity, "I have an awful headache," might translate to "I'm worried about my grade in chemistry." Or, that a husband's constant complaining about "those office stooges," means he really wants to go back to school, get his master's and then teach history in California.

Listening (and love) simply doesn't work as a sometime thing. It has to be there when it's needed. Perhaps real listening is more than art than an attitude. It needn't be too time-consuming because quality is vastly more important than quantity.

Obviously, one cannot sit like a sponge sopping up every vague comment or the laundry would never get done, a poem would never be written, your favorite dessert would only be a memory. But, not finishing the ironing or putting down a measuring spoon at just the right time can pay big dividends.

Death by Invisibility

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare says had been told that his job was a one-day passport to ulcers and oblivion, but he likes it. HEW has 43 different divisions, employs 10,000 persons and has a budget of 51 billion dollars.

The Secretary admits the job is difficult because, "We are the attacked as well as the attacker. Our welfare system must be changed but at present there is a deadlock on welfare reform."

Speaking before a crowded luncheon at the National Press Club (which he called the press capital of the world) he said: "My purpose today is to describe where the situation now stands. The President's proposal, in an all-network prime time telecast of August 8, was offered in the hope that it would trigger a great national debate on the absolutely compelling need for fundamental welfare reform. We are not banking on enactment of the Family Assistance Plan in every precise detail, but rather on establishing its basic principles — a national income floor, coverage for the working poor, national eligibility standards, and some measure of Federal administration, as fundamental, non-negotiable features."

"Its total cost in new Federal dollars would be $4.4 billion a year — its coverage would reach to 25 million persons, compared with 10 million under our present systems. And despite these substantial increases in a program that most of us would like to see just go away... despite this fact, public response has been overwhelmingly favorable. A nation-wide Gallup poll showed a 3-to-1 "positive" reaction. Editorial comment in the Nation's press has run about 95 percent favorable. And many important national organizations have endorsed the broad principles of the Family Assistance Plan."

"And yet, here we are coming down to the crunch in the Ways and Means Committee — and we haven't even begun to hear the kind of national debate on welfare reform we must have if any proposal is to succeed. This most revolutionary social proposal since the '30s — and that is not my phrase but the characterization of the plan made by several newspapers and magazines — this revolutionary proposal is being threatened with 'death by invisibility' at the hands of a Congress apparently too preoccupied with other matters even to offer alternative reform proposals of its own."

"Another complicating factor has been the total absence of any Democratically sponsored alternative in the Congress to the President's proposal; there simply is none. We think it would be in the interest of welfare reform if there were some Democratic alternative on the table so that the cause of welfare reform need not be identified solely with a Republican President and Republican members of Congress. Obviously, we would be delighted if Democratic members would be willing to associate themselves with the Family Assistance Plan and join in its sponsorship."

"We know the things that are terribly wrong with our present welfare systems. We know it is indefensible to perpetuate them for even one more year. The problem is not accumulating new knowledge — it is mobilizing the will to act on what we know already, and know from long, disastrous experience."

Taxpayers Ask IRS

Q — When is a year-end dividend on stock taxable, the year it is declared or the year it is received?

A — A dividend, like other income, is generally taxable the year it is received. In the case of year-end dividends, the stockholder usually doesn't receive his check until the following year. This would make the dividend taxable the year following the one in which it was declared.

Today's hand is a cinch for five hearts provided declarer remembers to ruff a diamond in dummy. Let's look at George Gooden's teaching technique.

He starts by explaining why the South hand should be opened one heart. It has 17 high-card points but you should never open no-trump with a singleton. For suit purposes it is worth 19 points because of the two distributional points for a singleton. It is a good hand but too weak to open with two. You open one heart because with two biddable suits of unequal length you should open the longer one.

The North hand is worth eight points in support of hearts and with adequate trump support is a proper raise to two. South has enough to go right to game. Remember, 26 points is the normal requirement for a 10-trick suit game.

South looks over dummy and counts five trump tricks, one diamond trick and three or four club tricks depending on whether or not the club suit will break 3-2.

Can he get an extra trick in the trump suit? He can ruff some spades in his own hand but this isn't going to give him any extra tricks since he will be ruffing with a normal trump trick. On the other hand, if he can ruff some card in dummy he will be collecting a sixth trump trick and he can ruff a diamond there provided he does not pull trumps.

Hence South wins the first heart in dummy; plays ace and another diamond and ruffs his last diamond in dummy the next time he gains the lead.

Make Boys' Ties Out of Men's Ties

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. B. B., who wants to make boys ties out of men's ties—I make ties for my boys by cutting off the wide ends of men's ties, fold in and press. Tack if you wish. Use the large end to put in his top coat pocket to look like a matching handkerchief. They look like well-dressed little gentlemen even though they do not always behave as such. —P. C.

DEAR POLLY—Do tell Mrs. C. B. that some men's ties can be changed to a boy's size simply by cutting the desired length off the narrow end and then shaping and stitching by hand. Other styles are best shortened by cutting the desired length from the wide end and shaping the remaining part. It all depends on the design of the tie. I have also made clip-on ties for my husband and sons by using the plastic clips from worn-out ties by shortening a regular tie and tying it on the plastic clip. My men prefer these to tying a tie. One must carefully note how the original tie was put on the clip so as to put the new one on correctly. —MRS. D. R.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—One side of my terrace is thick with ivy but the other side has bare spots. Can anyone tell me how to root ivy so I can plant some of it on the bare side. I have tried sand, vermiculite and water but had no success. —MRS. F. J. S.

DEAR POLLY—Most of us have trouble in finding the cut end on a thread spool when we want to slip the end back to keep it from unraveling. I use a bright marker pen or crayon on either side of this slit when I first use the thread and have no more looking for the slit. When you cannot find this slit, make another with a razor blade and then mark it. This is easy on the eyes and keeps a sewing kit neat. —MRS. C. B. C.

DEAR POLLY—Never discard knee-high or thigh-high socks when they get holes in them. Simply cut off the feet and they make great extra "sleeves" for keeping arms warm when sledding or ice skating. —MRS. L. H.

West Stars Try Late, But East Sacks Victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — On display next summer at the Willis Reed All-Star Basketball Camp will be a trophy proving that it's what's up front that counts.

It will serve as a reminder to the teen-age boys present that instructing them in the finer points of the game is one of the best up front—Willis Reed. Reed already has proved it to some 15,000 persons in Philadelphia's Spectrum and to a national television audience by leading the East to a 142-135 victory over the West in the National Basketball Association All-Star game Tuesday night.

The muscular 6-foot-8 center of the New York Knicks scored all of his 21 points and hauled in 11 rebounds as the East pulled away to a 106-85 advantage entering the final period. The West made one last effort that got it within six points with two minutes left before falling back.

For his efforts, Reed was voted overwhelmingly the Most Valuable Player in his sixth All-Star game that increased the East's lead over the West to 146.

"The game was decided at center," agreed Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati and the East, who was runnerup in the MVP balloting after scoring 21 points that gave him a record 230 for All-Star competition.

"You saw what happened. They just can't stop those two, offensively and off the boards."

He referred to Reed and 7-2 Lew Alcindor of Milwaukee, who had 10 points and 11 rebounds and gave the East the 1-2 center punch that had made them the favorites in the absence of injured Wilt Chamberlain and Nate Thurmond of the West.

"Reed is the toughest center in the league right now," praised Elvin Hayes of San Diego, who scored 24 points and had 15 rebounds as the West's big man.

Leeton Wins Loop Game By 66-57

CHILHOWEE — Leeton added their 12th win against five setbacks Tuesday night by downing conference foe Chilhowee, 66-57.

David Bancroft was the leading scorer for Leeton with 28, while Jon Armstrong and Larry Willcockson added 21 and 12 respectively for the winners.

Jim Courtney led the losers attack with 15; Roger Bancroft and John Murphy followed with 12 each.

Leeton averaged 46 percent from the field and 52 percent from the charity strip, while 30 percent from the field was all that the hosts could muster.

Chilhowee did however, hit 71 percent from the line.

Leeton capped the junior varsity game in overtime, 46-43. Bill Van Winkle was the game's leading scorer with 22 Bulldog points.

Leeton now stands at 4-0 in the conference and will host Montrose in a non-conference match, Friday.

Laments Joe Frazier

Cassius Clay recites poetry about Joe Frazier outside a theater in Philadelphia Tuesday night where he watched himself lose a computerized fight to Rocky Marciano. (UPI)

Rockey Wins Match

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Cassius Clay lost a computerized fight to Rocky Marciano but he didn't lose his sense of humor, his penchant for challenging poetry, or his verbal jabs at rival heavyweight Joe Frazier.

The film, staged before Marciano's death last year and screened in some 500 movie houses Tuesday night, showed Clay a 13th round knockout victim.

"It takes a good champion to lose like that," Clay told a newsman who had sat next to him in the darkened theater and had taken a couple of right elbow jabs in the ribs as the deposed heavyweight watched the action.

"Hey, watch that," said the worried newsman, a flyweight in size. "I'm not in the ring with you."

"Yeah, but that's fighting up there, and real good camera action," Clay replied, laughing. He sat in his shirt sleeves, his suit jacket held by his wife and a friend sat on his left trying to catch every one of his words on a tape recorder.

In the early rounds Clay took the lead. He said he was only watching the action — but he kept his eyes intently on the screen, sometimes rocking in his seat, his head often bobbing forward as he threw a punch.

"I'm sorry Rocky wasn't here to see it," Clay said. "He wanted to see it bad. You know there were seven different endings, and I had won twice by knockouts. I didn't know how it was going to come out, but that computer must have been in Alabama."

When Clay was counted out, he slumped just a little in his seat. Then he called out to the crowd of more than 400 already starting for the exits in the downtown Stanley Theater.

"All right, now let's see the real fight."

Clay, signing autographs willingly, seemed to enjoy the crowd that pressed around him, slapping his back, grabbing at his big hands.

"Joe Frazier wouldn't like this in his town," said Clay, whose title was stripped away in 1967 when he refused induction into the Army. "Or is it his home town?"

Clay this month began negotiations to complete purchase of a $92,000 home in Philadelphia's swank Overbrook section. He's now living there with his family pending final settlement.

He emphasized several times between screen rounds that he would never fight professionally again, and that the film battle was his last. But suddenly he'd stand up and shout, "I'd wup Frazier anytime, all the time."

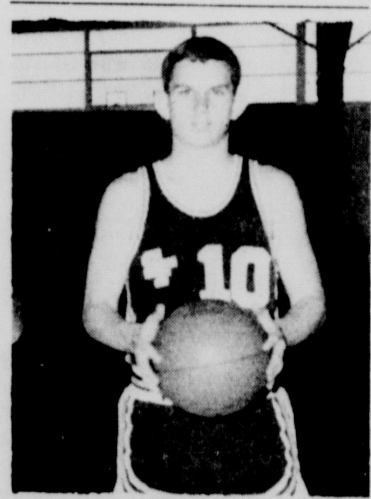

Once he waxed poetically: "Joe is going to come out smoking, but I'm not going to be joking."

"It may shock and amaze yer, to see the destruction of Frazier."

Frazier is recognized as Heavyweight champion in Pennsylvania, New York and several other states. He is to fight Jimmy Ellis, the National Boxing Association champion, later this year.

Area high school basketball teams are starting to show their prowess and a couple of teams that had not been anticipated by some to have outstanding years are proving those onlookers wrong.

One team in particular, the Warrensburg Tigers, under the leadership of head Coach Jerry Elliott, is currently sporting an 11-0 record and have to that credit two tournament championships.

The Tigers, a member of the "so-so powerful", West-Central Conference, most recently won the Knob Noster Tournament and opened the 1969-70 basketball season with three straight wins in the Holden Invitational affair.

In between the two tourneys, the Tigers posted wins over Clinton, Southeast of Kansas City, conference foe Knob Noster and Blue Springs.

The Tigers added another win Tuesday night by defeating Santa Fe, 79-59.

Looking down the schedule for the remainder of the season for the Tigers, it could be that they will have a couple of more tough games before the regional, which will be held in Windsor this year.

Eldorado Springs and Windsor look to be the only two teams that have an inside shot at untracking the powerful Tigers.

One of those two contests will be played in Warrensburg; the final game of the season will find the Windsor Greyhounds on the Tigers' court on Feb. 20.

The other, which will pit El Dorado Springs against the Tigers, will be played in El Dorado Springs on Feb. 6.

Warrensburg is fortunate in the fact that they will in all probability, draw the number one seed in fairly-weak regional being held in Windsor this year.

Teams in that regional include Butler, Clinton, Sherwood, El Dorado Springs, Harrisonville, Holden, Knob Noster, Raymore-Peculiar, Pleasant Hill, Rich Hill, Warrensburg College High, Warrensburg and host Windsor.

Orr, Howe Spark NHL East Win Over West

ST. LOUIS AP — Chicago Blackhawk golden boy Bobby Hull called the coaching of Montreal's Claude Ruel a key factor in Tuesday night's 23rd National Hockey League all-Star game, a 4-1 walkaway for the Eastern division.

"That Ruel," Hull grinned. "He said all the right things, like skate, check, shoot, get three men back. We couldn't lose with help like that."

Except for a moment at the outset, Hull and the East far outclassed the West, which was pressed to launch 17 shots to a record 44 for the winners.

A looping shot from the blue line boy, Pittsburgh's Dan Prentice with 37-seconds gone and spectacular relief goal tending by St. Louis' Jacques Plante kept things respectable.

The goal by Prentice, his second in four all-star games tied the score at 1-1 before powerful East lines spearheaded by Hull and veteran Gordie Howe of the Detroit Red Wings took command.

Howe scored the tie-breaking goal at 7:20 of the opening period on a power-play pass from Hull, and second period goals by Hull and the New York Rangers Walt Tkaczuk capped the offense.

The 41-year-old Plante, called on to relieve bedazzled Bernie Parent of Philadelphia midway in the second period, gave an all-star record crowd of 16,587 its only cause for cheers over the final 30-minutes.

Skillfully turning back six shots, still in the middle session, the adroit Plante became a whirling dervish in repelling a record 20 shots the East manufactured in the final 20 minutes.

Plante, Hull and swift skating Boston defenseman Bobby Orr were named the game's stars.

300 Boys Interested In SJLF

The board of directors of the Sedalia Junior League Football program met Monday night and to the delight of most all members, it was reported that 300 boys in the Sedalia schools had signed circulated forms with the interest to play in the youth organization this coming fall.

It was reported that still some schools have the information circulating.

Among other business conducted, the constitution and by-laws were adopted by the governing body.

An intense campaign is now underway by the organization to attempt to find sponsors for next year.

If businesses, groups or local organizations are interested in sponsoring a team next year, they are asked to contact Charles Thompson at Broadway Lanes, Dick Van Dyne at ADCO, Inc. or Jim Menefee at Menefee Construction Co.

Frosh 'B' Team Stays Undefeated

By DAVID STOLL

Led by C. E. Baldwin and Joe Fisher, Smith-Cotton's Freshman "B" team remained undefeated this year as they downed Windsor 45-31 Tuesday night in the opening round of the Windsor tournament.

Baldwin connected for 15 points and Fisher sank 11 as the "B" team ran their record to 4-0. Fisher also pulled down 9 rebounds. Jim Estes had 12 rebounds to lead the Tigers effort.

Both teams started off slow in the game and after five minutes of play the Tigers were on top 2-1. At the end of the first quarter the "B" team was on top 12-7. A strong second quarter made it 27-11 and one point was added to this lead after three quarters, 37-20.

Windsor could have made the game close by connecting at the free throw line but they hit only 5 of 23. Smith-Cotton sank 7 of 13.

NBA Officials Decide On Addition Next Year

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Basketball Association, choosing a collision course with the rival American Basketball Association, has decided to add four new cities next season. Now the question is can the cities afford the NBA's other additions?

Aside from voting 12-2 Tuesday to expand into Cleveland, Buffalo, Houston and Portland, Ore., the NBA owners also reportedly added some $500,000 to the entrance fee per franchise, raising it to something like $3.5 million.

Another addition to the price of belonging to the NBA is believed to include a term that would give the new city little of the television money.

"There is a good chance four teams will be added," said NBA administrative assistant Carl Scheer, making the expansion announcement for President Walter Kennedy, who was suffering from laryngitis. "The terms and conditions are being discussed and will continue to be discussed with the applicants."

"The owners will reconvene in a special meeting in the next two weeks when a formal announcement will be made."

While the five hopefuls—Buffalo has two bidders—came to the pre All Star game meeting ready to fulfill earlier conditions, several and possibly even all five, might not be willing to surrender to the new prerequisites.

Cleveland's Nick Mileti and Portland's Harry Glickman both left town abruptly after the all-day owner's expansion meeting and announcement, not bothering to stay for the East's 142-135 victory over the West Tuesday night.

But Mileti and the others certainly weren't the only ones unhappy about the results of the meetings that dragged on through confusion and bickering, on and off, from Monday morning through Tuesday evening.

The meetings resulted in a reaffirmation of an earlier decision by the NBA to expand, although that earlier pronouncement indicated only two new cities would be taken in.

Four votes were needed to nix expansion and New York's Ned Irish reportedly was joined by as many as seven of his brethren at one time in rejecting expansion.

However, after a change in the expansion committee for "a fresh approach," the expansion-minded owners once again gained the upper hand.

Osage Indians Get Non-Loop Win From 'Dogs

STOVER — The Stover Bulldogs lost a 59-48 non-conference game played in Stover Tuesday night against School of the Osage.

By the end of the first half, Osage had mounted a 29-12 lead and held on to grab the road victory.

Ted Petchell and Danny Wickam were tops for Osage with 18 and 13; Jeff Stevens and Craig Rowland paced the losers' attack with 14 and 12.

Stover took the junior varsity contest, 48-44.

Phil Marriott led the Bulldogs with 14 points; Doug Jang was tops for Osage with 15.

Tipton Cards Down California For 72-63 Win

TIPTON — The Tipton Cardinals stretched their season's mark to 7-6 with a 72-63 win over California Tuesday night.

Rick Knipp and Dave Finger hit 28 and 20 points in that order for the winning Cards.

Allen Meyer and Mike Robertson had 25 and 20 for the losers.

California salvaged the junior varsity contest, 39-31. Steve Johnson paced the winners' attack with 13; Darrell Lathem was the leader in the scoring column for Tipton with eight.

'Jays Stretch Golden Valley League Mark

MONTROSE — The Blue Jays for Montrose stretched their undefeated string in the Golden Valley Conference with an 88-42 win over Deepwater Tuesday night to 3-0.

Larry Brownsberger was the leading scorer for Montrose with 21, as five of the winning team members hit in double figures.

Thompson and Sapp for Deepwater lead the scoring column with 20 and 10 respectively.

The junior varsity contest also went to the host Blue Jays, 39-19.

Sweet Springs Drops Contest To Smithton

SMITHTON — The Smithton Tigers edged closer to the .500 mark in season's play with a 69-36 win over Sweet Springs Tuesday night.

For the year, the Tigers stand at 8-9.

Mike Johnson and Brent Hampy topped the scorers for Smithton with 23 and 15 in that order.

Charles Langewisch was the leading point-getter for the visitors with eight.

In the junior varsity clash however, Sweet Springs showed their strong sophomores could outlast Smithton, 30-28.

Matches Delayed By Heavy Rain

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Rain prevented play today and tonight in the combined Australian-New South Wales Tennis Championships at White City.

Among second-round singles matches that were postponed were a couple of big U.S.-Australian clashes—Dennis Ralston vs. Allan Stone and Arthur Ashe vs. Bill Bowrey.

The three Davis Cuppers scored straight victories. Smith, the top-ranked American from Pasadena, Calif., eliminated John Rowan of Australia 6-1, 8-6, 6-4. Lutz, of Los Angeles, tripped Matt Werren of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.

Boudreau Named to Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Boudreau waited 12 years before getting elected into Baseball's Hall of Fame but his outspoken son-in-law—Denny McLain—thinks Boudreau should have received the honor sooner.

"I'm a little prejudiced but I think he should have gotten it 10 years ago," McLain, the Detroit Tigers' pitching ace, said Tuesday after Boudreau was voted into the Hall of Fame by a narrow seven vote margin.

McLain, only 25, has already won over 100 games in his six year major league career. He won 31 games in 1968 and 24 last year, capturing the Cy Young Award both seasons.

"I hope I'm leading a little path that he can follow," Boudreau, 52, said in New York, where he was on hand personally when Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn officially made the announcement. Boudreau earlier had received the good news at a bowling alley in his Dalton, Ill., home town late Monday night.

The former Cleveland Indians shortstop, who at 24 became a major league manager and won a batting title in 1944, played for 15 years, compiling a .295 lifetime batting mark.

Boudreau managed the Indians from 1942 until 1950 and also piloted the Boston Red Sox from 1952 to 1954 and Kansas City from 1955 to 1958. He then took a job as a sportscaster with WGN in Chicago, where he still works.

Boudreau received 232 votes of the 300 cast by the Baseball Writers Association of America, just seven more than the required 225.

Finishing behind Boudreau this time were Ralph Kiner, the former Pittsburgh Pirates slugger, with 167 votes, followed by Gil Hodges, former Brooklyn Dodger now manager of the world champion New York Mets, with 145.

Early Wynn, the former Cleveland pitcher, who was the most recent 300-game winner in the majors, finished fourth.

Phased Out Bases Can Create Economic Havoc

By DAVE ZIMMERMAN
Associated Press Writer

The Pentagon announces it is closing a major military base for economy reasons. Residents protest, local officials and businessmen talk of impending economic damage to the community in the form of reduced jobs and commerce.

To what extent do such predictions come true? A survey of six areas where major installations were shut down developed these major findings:

Airports, industrial parks, college buildings and private homes have at least partially filled the vacuum created when military installations were phased out.

Officials in some communities say they are better off than they were when the bases were operating, though at least one, New Iberia, La., reports it hasn't fared as well.

In Greenville, S.C., when Donaldson Air Force Base closed in 1963, 700 civilians were suddenly out of work. Retail sales dropped several million dollars and several hundred homes and apartments stood vacant for two or three years.

Within the last two years, however, the land once occupied by the base was taken over by the city and county and several large businesses, including Union Carbide and Farmico, have taken up residence.

After the 5,000-acre site once occupied by Stead Air Force Base near Reno, Nev., closed in 1966, the city took charge of a 1,700-acre airfield and now operates it as a second municipal airport.

Since then, 2,000 acres of the base site have been leased at $1.3 million for an industrial park, a $3.5-million housing development, an extension of the University of Nevada and a 200-acre county golf course.

In Bangor, Maine, the city bought for a token $11,440-foot runway and related facilities.

Carswell's Rulings Deal With Variety of Problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Harold Carswell's rulings as a federal judge have dealt with schools, labor, and a variety of civil rights cases.

In 1961, the Supreme Court Justice-designate, then a U.S. District Judge in Tallahassee, Fla., forbade city officials to segregate restaurant or rest-room facilities at the new city airport.

In 1963, he dismissed a suit by a black woman asking that Tallahassee theaters be required to sell tickets to Negroes. The U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans reversed Carswell's order of dismissal, but the case was settled before further hearing.

In 1965 Carswell ordered a barber shop in a Tallahassee hotel to serve black customers. The barber, whom Carswell patronized, instead went into the barber supply business.

Later in 1965, Carswell dismissed a suit brought by Negroes to force the opening of Tallahassee public swimming pools that were closed after a "wade-in" by blacks.

Since neither blacks nor whites could be served by closed pools, he ruled, there was nothing discriminatory about the city's refusal to open the pools.

After he was named to the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, Carswell last year joined 13 other judges in an unanimous ruling that delayed immediate school desegregation in Mississippi at the request of the Justice Department.

ties left when Dow Air Force Base closed in 1968. Now the runway is a nest for transatlantic jets, many of which refuel at Bangor International Airport.

Besides housing Trans East Airlines, the old Dow site serves a General Electric Co. turbine production plant, a University of Maine campus, textile and precision instrument manufacturers and various smaller businesses.

City officials estimate that the new tenants have provided nearly 500 new jobs, almost equaling the number lost when the base shut down.

"A military economy is not a very solid one," said City Manager Merle F. Goff. "In the long run, we'll be better off."

When the base first closed, car dealers and furniture stores were hit hard, but sales tax figures now show no evidence of a dip in retail buying.

"There is a loss," however, said Edward G. McKeon, the city's economic development director. "It's hard to measure. But it hasn't created any depression."

But in New Iberia, La., there are problems.

When the New Iberia Naval Auxiliary Air Facility shut down its 4,300-acre site in 1964, Iberia Parish obtained 1,435 acres of the base for an airport and a state-backed corporation acquired 465 acres and several buildings for its work.

Despite initial loss of retail sales, put at $3 million, parish residents looked forward to developing the remaining 2,400 acres of what they thought was public land.

The Government Services Administration surprised area residents, however, by pulling the $1.9-million parcel back into its "excess" category and is now contemplating whether GSA itself needs the land—to trade for highly valuable New Orleans property.

In effect, putting property up for a swap moves private interests to the head of the acquisition.

The Supreme Court reversed the ruling.

In two early rulings on labor cases, Carswell decided once for management and once for labor.

In 1958 he denied a petition for injunction sought by Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell against a Pensacola, Fla., contractor charged with violating minimum wage, overtime and record-keeping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

Carswell held that evidence disclosed the contractor did not intentionally violate the act and there was no reasonable likelihood he would violate it in the future.

In 1959 Carswell agreed that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers became the bargaining agent for foremen at the Gulf Power Co. when the firm recognized a wage-scale agreement covering the foremen.

Carswell was part of a three-judge panel that stepped out of a natural gas rate reduction case last October because the other two judges owned stock in some of the firms involved.

In a draft case last month Carswell sustained a district court ruling that upheld the reclassification of a Texas man from ministerial deferment to conscientious objector. The man had contended his draft board did not have the authority to reclassify him, but Carswell said he had failed to establish his case.

list, ahead of local public agencies, and bitter rivalry has emerged over how the land should be used.

One group argues that it should be used for an expanded airport. Another says it is more suited for an industrial park. A third group says it should be used for farming and mineral exploitation, while a fourth favors a campus for the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Meanwhile, 2,400 acres in rich sugar cane country lie idle and the bickering goes on.

Lincoln, Neb., was more fortunate when Lincoln Air Force Base shut down in 1966.

For one thing, the Job Corps quickly settled 500 staff and 1,000 volunteers on the base site and occupancy ran as high as 87 per cent for a time.

This tended to soften somewhat the initial loss of more than 300 civilian jobs at the base and an estimated $47 million annually that was pumped into Lincoln's economy.

The Job Corps pulled out of Lincoln in 1968, but town officials say the city rolled with that punch.

Occupancy of converted air base buildings, largely by industry, now amounts to 35 to 40 per cent of the facility's two million square feet of enclosed floor space.

Of the 1,000 family housing units on the base's 4,000 acres, all still habitable are occupied and there is a waiting list of prospective tenants.

A recent private study indicated that the old air base area and the Lincoln Municipal Airport operation, which is part of the complex, were providing employment to 1,500 persons with an annual payroll of $8 million.

"In the long run it was to Lincoln's benefit," Thomas Pansing, a one-time president of Lincoln's Chamber of Commerce said, "not only that it happened, but that it happened when it did."

A similar situation occurred at Benecia, Calif., where the 115-year-old Benecia Army Depot was phased out in 1964, initially idling 2,300 workers.

Today, on the same 2,200 acres, stands a $168-million Humble Oil Co. refinery and 63 smaller firms employing approximately 2,000 men and women who earn up to $20 million yearly.

With the former depot land and improvements now valued at over $175 million, annual taxes for the county, city and local school district total around $3.2 million.

A recently published San Francisco Bay plan ranked Benecia as the No. 1 spot for future, water-oriented industrial expansion in the bay area.

Resigns Position In American Party

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Floyd G. Kitchen has resigned as state chairman of the American Party.

Kitchen, who organized George C. Wallace's 1968 presidential campaign in Missouri, announced his resignation Saturday.

A field director of White Citizens Councils, Kitchen said his duties are taking him to Florida.

A Springfield woman, Mrs. Roy Wasson, will act as chairman of the state's American Party until a permanent chairman is chosen, Kitchen said.

Wallace polled 204,375 votes in Missouri during the 1968 presidential campaign compared to 812,470 for President Nixon.

Pentagon Men Forecast Troop Ceiling Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some key Pentagon planners forecast the Army will be cut about three divisions below current authorized strength by 1972 as the United States gradually sheds its "policeman to the world" role.

This reduction, to 14 and two-thirds divisions, would carry the Army almost back to where it was when the Kennedy administration took over nine years ago.

Some planners predict the Army will be down to 11 or 12 divisions within three years.

This, it is believed, will be accompanied by a gradual pull-back of most U.S. troops from South Korea and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization area, as well as disengagement from Vietnam.

Army and Marine leaders believe that over the next several years, this country's ground forces will be concentrated in a U.S.-based central reserve, to be sent abroad only where preeminent interests are at stake.

Ground force generals feel this will lead to greater reliance on nuclear weapons, particularly big strategic missiles, to safeguard the nation.

This recalls a debate in the late stages of the Eisenhower administration.

Democratic critics and some Army generals claimed then that an emphasis on massive retaliation starved the conventional military forces and gave the nation little choice between all out atomic exchange and humiliation.

So the Kennedy administration not only accelerated the growth of U.S. missile power but also increased American conventional forces. It boosted the number of Army divisions from 14 to 16.

But the national strategy aims were different then.

Robert S. McNamara, then secretary of Defense, told Congress in January 1962 this country's nonnuclear land, sea, and air forces had to be strengthened "if we are to have the capacity to respond promptly to limited wars in any part of the globe, and possibly in more than one place at the same time."

The Nixon administration, with the Vietnam war experience shaping its direction, aims to minimize commitment of U.S. ground forces abroad in the future.

As U.S. troops are gradually withdrawn from the Vietnam war, the Nixon administration has set in motion a reduction of U.S. forces.

The Nixon administration has pledged to maintain its present combat troop commitment in South Korea, totaling some 55,000 men, and its level of about 320,000 in Europe over the next 18 months.

But it is making no promises beyond July 1971. In fact, Undersecretary of State Elliot L. Richardson said Tuesday in Chicago that while the United States is pledged to maintain its current strength in Europe until mid-1971 that doesn't mean the level will be held "for ever and ever."

Some senior generals are forecasting the U.S. commitment in NATO will be reduced to as few as 50,000 men by about 1975.

In the meantime, sources said, they believe the Nixon administration will try to work for a parallel withdrawal by the Russians from the other side of the Iron Curtain.

Minuteman Convicted Rapidly

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury took but 48 minutes Tuesday to convict Robert Bolivar DePugh, leader of the Minutemen organization, on a charge of bond jumping.

The sentencing of DePugh, 46, of Norborne, Mo., will be deferred at least 25 days. He was returned to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., where he is serving a one-year term on a federal firearms violation.

The defense failed to call a witness even though it had subpoenaed 11, including Jim Garrison, district attorney of Orleans Parish in Louisiana.

Robert Duncan, a defense attorney said he thought there was enough reversible error in the trial that it could be won on appeal.

DePugh was charged with willful failure to appear for trial in U.S. District Court in Kansas City Dec. 3, 1968.

Occupancy of converted air base buildings, largely by industry, now amounts to 35 to 40 per cent of the facility's two million square feet of enclosed floor space.

Of the 1,000 family housing units on the base's 4,000 acres, all still habitable are occupied and there is a waiting list of prospective tenants.

A recent private study indicated that the old air base area and the Lincoln Municipal Airport operation, which is part of the complex, were providing employment to 1,500 persons with an annual payroll of $8 million.

"In the long run it was to Lincoln's benefit," Thomas Pansing, a one-time president of Lincoln's Chamber of Commerce said, "not only that it happened, but that it happened when it did."

A similar situation occurred at Benecia, Calif., where the 115-year-old Benecia Army Depot was phased out in 1964, initially idling 2,300 workers.

Today, on the same 2,200 acres, stands a $168-million Humble Oil Co. refinery and 63 smaller firms employing approximately 2,000 men and women who earn up to $20 million yearly.

With the former depot land and improvements now valued at over $175 million, annual taxes for the county, city and local school district total around $3.2 million.

A recently published San Francisco Bay plan ranked Benecia as the No. 1 spot for future, water-oriented industrial expansion in the bay area.

The council is a cooperative organization of 33 protestant and orthodox denominations with a total of more than 40 million members. Its general board, made up of 250 denominational delegates, is its interim policy-making group.

The action here capped a challenge to the usual committee selection process, launched at the council's general assembly last month.

Miss Hoover, a United Methodist of New York, was named to bring in a new list of nominees.

Of the four major council divisions, two now are headed by blacks, two by whites.

Altogether about 550 positions were filled. Miss Hoover said "We got in more black male clergy but beyond that, the representation of other minorities was not greatly increased. There were not as many changes as we would have liked."

"But we were bound by rules that sustained the establishment."

These rules include the requirement that anyone named to a council post has to have clearance of his denominational leadership.

George Hecker of St. Louis, a United Presbyterian layman, complained that the outcome failed to deal with "one of the more serious criticisms of the council—that it is run primarily by denominational hierarchies."

The church is "predominantly laymen," he said, and more of them should hold key council jobs.

Jumbo Jet Era Begins Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) — A new era in mass transportation begins today with the first commercial flight of a new breed of planes, the Boeing 747, a 362-seat jumbo jet.

The first flight, by a Pan American World Airways jet, is scheduled to fly from New York to London in six hours and 25 minutes. It departs at 7 p.m.

The plane, to be commanded by Pan American's chief Atlantic pilot, Capt. Robert M. Weeks, 49, of Setauket, N.Y., will initiate daily 747 service from New York to London and back.

The plane has been christened "Young America" by Mrs. Richard M. Nixon. Pan American calls it the "largest airplane ever designed for commercial service."

The inaugural flight today is expected to be followed shortly by a number of regularly scheduled international and domestic runs by jumbo jets. Boeing says 185 of the planes are on order.

Church Council Votes On Slate of Representatives

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—A tradition-breaking slate of church representatives Monday night was elected to key committee posts of the National Council of Churches. The aim was to give a greater voice to minorities.

However, the new roster still drew complaints that it failed to represent some groups adequately—such as women, youth and lay people.

"There seems to be more minorities than majorities," Miss Theresa Hoover, a young Negro lay woman, observed at one point.

Election of the committee and board personnel, with an increased proportion of blacks, came at the start of a five-day meeting of the council's general board.

The council is a cooperative organization of 33 protestant and orthodox denominations with a total of more than 40 million members. Its general board, made up of 250 denominational delegates, is its interim policy-making group.

Efficiency Expert Proved to be too Efficient

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A. Ernest Fitzgerald was a good efficiency expert. So good the Air Force nominated him for most outstanding federal employee in 1967.

That was before Fitzgerald revealed the cost of building the 130 C-5A cargo planes the government ordered from Lockheed was going to cost about $2 billion more than the original estimate.

Now Fitzgerald is a good out-of-work efficiency expert. The Air Force abolished his $31,000-a-year job; the Air Force says it was an economy measure. Fitzgerald says the Air Force loses several times his annual salary "through the cracks."

He is a mild-mannered man who took the consequences of telling Congress about the cost overrun philosophically. While one secretary finished clearing out her desk and departed for the personnel office to find out what her new job would be, Fitzgerald adjusted his glasses — the kind with plastic rims that are dark on top and clear below — and explained he was surprised by the intensity of the attack launched on him after his testimony before a Senate committee.

"We had always won these little tussles before," he said, "but they wanted very badly to conceal this one."

Why?

Fitzgerald thinks his superiors at the Pentagon believed Lockheed was going to lose so much money on the C-5As that the company would go out of business. "The estimate is that Lockheed was $671 million over the ceiling at the completion of the first 58 planes."

The Air Force wrote a new contract including a repricing formula that Fitzgerald says was designed to bail out Lockheed. According to the formula, if the cost of the remaining 62 planes ran less than 10 per cent over the ceiling, the Air Force would pay back one-and-one-half times the loss. If the prices were more than 10 per cent above the ceiling, Lockheed would get back twice the amount from the Air Force.

"It's a reverse incentive," Fitzgerald said. "You can see that it would be better for Lockheed to be 11 per cent over than 9 per cent over. Of course, on the first groups of planes the overrun was nearly 40 per cent."

"We figured that with 33 more planes, Lockheed would offset the losses on the first run of planes. After that, the rest would be gravy."

That's what Fitzgerald told the congressional committee studying the defense budget.

"I caused some embarrassment by answering Sen. Proxmire's question truthfully," he said. The "embarrassment" caused a flurry of activity that reached all the way up to the Air Staff.

There was a memo outlining three ways Fitzgerald could be removed from his job — one being to abolish the position.

Another memo was sent to Fitzgerald to inform him that he had been given the status of a career civil servant (who couldn't be fired) because of a computer error. Then he was taken off his job as the top man in cost control for major weapons systems and put in charge of figuring expenses for a servicemen's bowling alley in Thailand.

Rumors about Fitzgerald holding stock in a consulting firm that handles government contract accounts were widespread, Fitzgerald said. He was president of the firm until he took the Air Force job in 1965 but claims he sold all the stock, 30 per cent of the company, within a month after he took the job.

"I was even criticized for working late and driving an old car," he said wryly. "During the Johnson administration, I was accused of being a member of an ultra-right-wing conspiracy trying to destroy our defense system. Lately, with the Republicans in office, I've been explained away as a member of a left-wing conspiracy trying to destroy our defense system."

Despite intimations that the administration was looking for another job for Fitzgerald, he says he received no offers. So he is opening his own office in Washington and will return to private consulting. A lawsuit challenging the legality of Fitzgerald's dismissal and the investigation that preceded may be filed.

Fitzgerald's friends in Washington say his dismissal is another step toward closer congressional control over Pentagon spending. But the Defense Department reorganization that eliminated Fitzgerald's civilian job in the name of economy created a new office to be staffed by several Air Force members under the direction of Col. Frank Ayers.

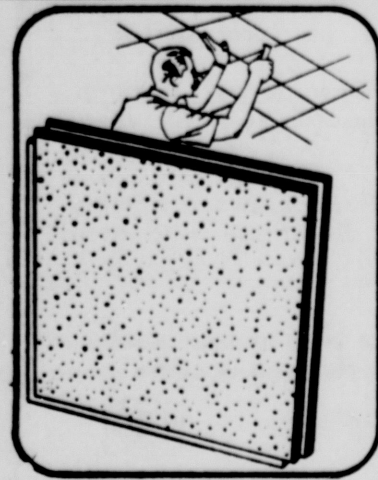

Fitzgerald claims the whole group will be assigned to do his old job.

Home Accidents Dangerous for Single Dwellers

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Home accidents can be killers. And they can be particularly chilling experiences if they occur while you are at home alone.

This prospect is every present for the estimated six million women in the United States who live independently.

Although accident categories may stem from common causes, the preventive measures differ somewhat for the woman who lives alone and the homemaker who lives with her family. The independent woman is concerned primarily with her own safety. The homemaker thinks of accident prevention mainly in terms of toddlers and school-age children in the home.

Whether you are an 18-year-old career girl in an apartment or an 80-year-old widow living in a house, safety practices suggested by the Council on Family Health should help you live alone more securely.

It is imperative for the woman living alone to practice safety with medicines. Have the patience to turn on the light instead of groping for the container in the dark. Have the patience to study the label while the medicine is still on the shelf. Take the time to read directions carefully when you have the container in hand. To make sure you are fully awake, read the directions aloud.

One way to avoid confusion is to color-code your medicine cabinet. Paint the top part of the cabinet yellow and store medicines for external use there. Paint the bottom part blue and use that section for toiletries.

If you have to take medicine during the night, keep only enough for one dosage beside the bed. This reduces the chance of over-dosing due to drowsiness.

Early Calendar

The Egyptians adopted the first calendar based on the solar year in 4246 B.C. It was a 12-month calendar, with each month containing 30 days. To make the calendar come out even with the sun, they added five days at the end of the year — six days every fourth year. These added days were not part of any months, but were used as feast days in honor of their gods.

Falls comprise one of the most serious and common categories of home accidents. Whether your home is a one-room apartment or a big house, one of your most valuable pieces of furniture is a sturdy step stool. Use it to reach high places. Don't climb on unsteady chairs, drawers or tables.

If you decorate with small scatter rugs, remember to cover the backs with a non-skid substance. Even then it is not safe to place throw rugs beside the bed or at the head or foot of stairs.

Liquid household chemicals, which have done so much to ease household chores, can be injurious if used carelessly. Turn your face aside when pouring the chemicals. If any splatters on your skin, wash it off immediately.

A frightening prospect is the danger of fire, especially at night. There are a great many things you can do to minimize the dangers. Before going to bed, check the stove burners to be sure they are turned off. Snuff out candles. Check ashtrays for live ashes. Do not smoke in bed. If you live in an apartment house, know where the fire exits or fire escapes are located. If you live in a private house, provide adequate fire extinguishers and learn how to use them. Plan an escape route and practice it.

It does not seem to occur to many women that the power of electricity can cause serious accidental injury. Statistics show that women have taken electric hair dryers, plug-in radios, lamps and sunlamps into the bathroom while they are taking a bath. Serious injury and even death can occur when these useful products accidentally fall into the tub or when the bather reaches out and touches them.

Keep a box of baking soda near the cook stove. In case of burning grease, pour soda onto the flames.

To prevent delay when help is needed, print your name and address and the telephone number of your doctor and pharmacist, the nearest hospital, police and fire departments on a slip of paper and fix it to some part of your telephone.

The independent woman may be too uncommunicative for her own good. Have a friendly understanding with relatives and friends to check on you if they haven't seen you within a specified time.

And have a good first-aid sheet fixed to the back of the medicine chest. In an emergency it can be a woman's best friend—diamonds notwithstanding.

Conscience Wins Over Hunger Pains

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The Montana State University food service department says it has found someone with a conscience bigger than his stomach.

A letter with $5 enclosed recently was delivered to the department.

"To get this off my mind and in order to feel better," the anonymous correspondent explained, "I am returning in cash the value of food I had burgled two years ago.

Taken by the guilt-ridden gourmet were two loaves of bread, one pound of ham, one quart of ice cream, one box of shrimp and a jar of pickles.

"I am sorry for this unwarranted wrongdoing," he concluded.

"Whoever you are," said acting MSU President William A. Johnstone, "you are forgiven."

Radicals Create Reaction of Conservatism in Opposition

By TOM TIEDE
NEA Staff Correspondent
SAIGON — (NEA) — Right from the beginning of U.S. participation in this war, the official military outlook has been unfortunately bright.

Some of the very first assessments of the battlefield situation told of an enemy who was busy digging his own grave — an enemy whose redoubts were depleting, whose logistics were failing and whose will to fight probably couldn't continue in the face of enormous troop losses.

That was nine years ago this month. Since then, more than $100 billion, more than 10,000 aircraft, more than 140,000 friendly soldiers and more than one nation's patience have been spent trying to bury the other side's obstinate corpse.

And the war of the 1960s has become the war of the 1970s.

The lesson of all this is most obvious: Optimism has been no helpful ally in Vietnam. In fact, as much as enemy artillery, it has served to blow holes in the world's hope for peace.

So it is, after my fourth reporting assignment here, and with no real end to the fighting yet in sight, I hesitate to, but must, echo the past.

The military outlook here is still bright.

Facts are facts. There can be no denying them. The way war progress is measured, by statistical superiority and territorial ownership, the Communists in Vietnam have been mauled. Were they anything but dedicated guerrillas, drawing extraordinary transfusions from the social and political peculiarities of the war, the probability is they would now be altogether dead.

This isn't to say they are defeated. It's obvious they aren't. They maintain 200,000 regular troops in the South (half North Vietnamese, half Viet Cong); they have another estimated 100,000 irregulars here, they are present one way or another in every village in the land; they continue to kill, wound or capture at least 2,500 allied combatants every week.

Still, the Reds are hurting. Seriously. And the evidence of their suffering and incapacities are seen everywhere.

Some major examples:

— A few years ago as much as 50 per cent of South Vietnam was either in enemy hands or strongly under enemy influence. Early last year the figure dropped to 25 per cent. Currently the percentage is slightly below 10.

— In the past 12 months the Communists lost more than 60,000 men in battle deaths and 42,000 men through defections. This brought their nine-year war loss total to more than 700,000 — more than six times the allied sum.

— Even with U.S. withdrawals, the ratio of allied to enemy troops steadily widens. Five years ago it was about four to one. Last month South Vietnam increased its forces by 80,000 and the ratio now stands at seven to one.

But the statistics do not tell all of the military progress here. Perhaps they tell only very little of it. The real evidence of allied superiority is manifested in a more personal than documented way.

Some years ago, for instance, I was routinely shot at while motoring on major roads at the fringes of major cities. But just recently I hitchhiked without incident from Cu Chi to Tay Ninh, 80 miles distance, through what once was (and still is) some of the most contested battleland in the war.

Some years ago, a Viet Cong sniper took an inaccurate shot at me while I was sunning on the roof of my Saigon villa. Now

I sun without shields. Saigon, even with its thousands of Red sympathizers, is so thoroughly pacified it has fewer shooting incidents than any comparably sized U.S. cities.

Some years ago I took a helicopter tour of the 1st Infantry Division's Second Brigade (near the Michelin plantation) and counted 63 enemy kills for a day's combat. Recently I repeated the trip — but the area is now so secure, the enemy so scattered, I counted only one dead VC for 12 hours of U.S. effort.

And some years ago I spent my visits to the 25th Infantry Division in bunkers, waiting out mortar attacks. Now that unit camp is so quiet, even dull, many bunkers are torn down, sentries sleep soundly and sergeants must keep GIs alert by using such "peacetime" harassments as button and shoeshine checks.

To be sure, the present military situation in Vietnam is subject to change. Possibly abrupt. Some feel the enemy is actually not so much suffering as preparing for new offensives. Some feel the enemy is not so much devastated as he is deliberately laying low for more opportune times.

But just now, this day, the Communists are bleeding badly.

As U.S. officials tell it, the enemy's redoubts are depleting.

their logistics are failing and their will to fight probably can't continue in the face of enormous troop losses. In short, officials here are, uh, optimistic.

Install Masonic Officers

Don Hinchman, Kansas City, former FBI agent and presently personnel manager for Benson Company, Kansas City, was the speaker at the Scottish Rite dinner meeting held recently at the Masonic Temple. His topic was "Americanism."

The following officers were installed by B. E. Heacock, 32nd degree Mason: Milton C. Mathew, president; John St. Clair, first vice-president; Eugene Gregory, second vice-president; J. D. Schlobohm, secretary-treasurer; Oliver Blankenship, chaplain; Perry Wolkey, retiring president and outer guard.

A special guest was Roy Cissna, secretary Kansas City, Missouri, Scottish Rite.

Invocation was given by the chaplain, Oliver Blankenship.

Wolkey was presented a plaque by Adolph Glenn for his outstanding service as president the past year.

The speaker was introduced by Gene Landon, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The dinner was served by Sedalia Chapter No. 57, Order of the Eastern Star, with Mrs. Betty Hoehimer in charge.

New Lodge Officers

Scottish Rite officers installed recently are, left to right, front row: J. D. Schlobohm, secretary-treasurer; Eugene Gregory, second vice-president; Milton C. Mathew, president; John St. Clair, first vice-president; Roy Cissna, Kansas City, secretary Kansas City Missouri Valley Scottish Rite; Oliver Blankenship, chaplain. Back row: Perry Wolkey, retiring president, outer guard, and Burt Heacock, installing officer.

Pettis County Offices Boost Budget Requests

A breakdown of the 1970 budget requests before the Pettis County Court by the various county offices shows an increase in all but one of the departments, over last year's budget totals, with the sheriff's office seeking the highest budget boost.

Primarily due to a law passed in the Missouri legislature raising the allotment for county sheriff's offices and the operation of the new county jail, that department shows a $21,646 increase over the 1969 budget.

The lone county office showing an expected reduction this year is that of the county surveyor. The decrease is $62.36.

Here is the breakdown on requests for the 1970 calendar year:

County Court, $16,390; county clerk, $30,387.50; treasurer, $10,035; collector, $20,380; assessor, $18,120; circuit judge, $2,083.50; court reporter, $5,457.25; recorder of deeds, $9,597; Magistrate Court, $3,295; probate court, $21,391; prosecuting attorney, $18,177.50; sheriff, $62,956; coroner, $2,320.

Boonville Recalls Era of the Great Frontiersman

By Hazel Lang

BOONVILLE — From the mouth of the Osage River to about what today is the Kansas line was known as "Boonslick" country. It was named for the salt springs — which are in Howard County — and likely other licks discovered by Daniel Boone.

Boonville is in the heart of the Boonslick country and is the oldest town in Central Missouri. It was settled in February, 1810.

Fear of Indians

But prior to that, in 1808, John Heath and William Christie of St. Louis made salt in what is now Blackwater township in Cooper County. That year, too, Col. Benjamin Cooper, his wife, and five sons came to make their home two miles southwest of Boonslick in the Missouri River bottom. Even though they had built a cabin, they were ordered by Gov. Meriwether Lewis to return east of the Gasconade River, where, in case of an Indian uprising, they could be protected.

In this area had ventured only hunters and trappers before, who took back stories of the fertile land, the wooded hills, and the clear water of the springs found there.

When the Coopers returned to Loutre Island, they renewed friendship with other settlers, that included Stephen and William Temple Cole and their wives, who were sisters.

Shortly afterward horses were stolen from Loutre Island by roving Sacs and Pottowatomies and the Cole brothers, along with Marshall Brown, James Patton, Nicholas Gooch, Abraham Potts and James Murdock, went in pursuit of the Indians. But the Indians scattered and that night went to the camp and killed Gooch, Patton and Brown, who were asleep in their blankets. William T. Cole also died from wounds he received in the attack.

Toll of Attack

It was during this attack that Murdock escaped by slipping under a creek bank, leaving Stephen Cole to fight alone. Although he escaped, he was wounded 26 times. He later returned to the spot to find his brother, William Cole, dead. Three days later he staggered into the settlement, weak from hunger and loss of blood.

Street in City

The Main Street of Boonville is seen in this view looking south. The scene was photographed about the turn of the century. The Commercial Bank at left boasted capital and surplus of $60,000 at the time.

Hannah Cole, widow of William T. Cole, her nine children, Stephen Cole, his wife and five children, then settled in what is now East Boonville.

Hannah Cole was a tall woman and capable of taking care of her children. She worked hard but took her children to work with her. Her home became a fort to serve against Indian raids, and it was Hannah Cole's fort that the first county seat was located by the territorial legislature. The first court was held on July 8, 1816, with David Barton as the judge. Barton later became the president of the first Constitutional Convention, and then a United States senator.

Set Up Unit

In 1812 during a war with the Indians, a company of 112 rangers, daring and colorful men, was formed under the command of Marshall Cooper. The settlers on both sides of the river left their farm operations and "forted" up. The hunters brought ample game and the scouts returned with information, but the Indians stole horses, drove off cattle and murdered settlers caught in the attack.

The first victims were Jonathan Todd and Thomas Smith, who fought well when they were attacked by the Sacs and Foxes, killing four or five Indians, but they were finally killed. They were scalped by the Indians and their heads were cut off and stuck on a pole. Pleased with their success, the Indians crossed the Missouri to Cole's Fort. The next day the Rangers captured a keelboat loaded with powder and 500 pounds of musket balls, headed for Council Bluffs for trade with the Indians. The Rangers then calmly used the big craft to remove their families, live stock and all other possessions across to Fort Kincaid. Shoving the Frenchmen aboard they sent them on down the river telling them that to return would mean hanging.

Was a Cousin

Daniel Boone, the famous frontiersman, was a first cousin to Stephen and William Cole and now then visited at the Cole forts. According to Roy William, Boonville attorney, he never wore a hat, contrary to the popular image. In later years he built a cabin at Boonslick salt spring near Boonville and made it his temporary home for many months at the end of the 18th century, and the beginning of the 19th century.

Boone's two sons, Nathan and Daniel M. Boone, manufactured the first salt west of the Mississippi and floated it down the Missouri to St. Louis.

Among the many descendants of Hannah Cole is Paul Moore LaMonte, whose family history has provided a great deal of information for the Boonville story.

St. Joseph's Hospital now stands on the bluff where Hannah Cole's fort was located. For many years preceding the Civil War the hill was the scene of an annual fair, which is said to have been the forerunner of the Missouri State Fair. And it was here, too, that the second Battle of Boonville was fought on Sept. 13, 1863, where the trenches used in the battle can still be traced along the ridge. Now and then cannon balls or bullets are still found there.

Boonville was platted Aug. 1, 1817, and was surveyed by William Ross. A donation of 50 acres of land was made by Charles Lucas and Asa Morgan to Cooper County, and was accepted by the commissioners and the county seat was located there. The lots were laid out in 1819 and the first donation lots sold in 1821. The first houses built after the town was laid off were two brick homes on Morgan Street built by Asa Morgan. A brick house on High Street northeast of the court was built by R. P. Clark.

Focus of Trade

Its location on the Missouri River brought many settlers and rapid growth of river trade. Also, situated at a point where the Ozark uplands meet the western prairies, the Santa Fe Trail and other trails were opened.

Down by the bridge may be seen the cobblestones laid in 1830 which was part of the first paved street between St. Louis and the Pacific Ocean.

The first battle of the Civil War was fought near Boonville on June 17, 1861, a month before the Battle of Bull Run, when Federal troops defeated a force of confederate state troops. This was considered one of the most decisive battles of the war, since it had an important bearing on keeping Missouri in the Union.

Still in use is Thespian Hall, built by the Thespian Society in 1857, and the oldest theatre building west of the Alleghenies. During the Civil War it was fortified against attack and used as a hospital and a military prison. The Thespian Society was a dramatic organization founded in the 1830's.

Boonville also has the oldest surviving Episcopal Church west of the Mississippi which was built in 1846 of Gothic Revival design. In it is an old and very valuable organ.

Site of Kemper

Kemper Military School is the oldest boys' school west of the Mississippi and was founded in 1844 by Prof. F. T. Kemper. It is one of the foremost schools of its kind in the country.

In the old city cemetery is a gravestone of "Willie, the Little Stranger," which was erected by the people of Boonville in memory of a little boy who died there in 1856. He was traveling across the country with his parents when he died, was buried there, and his saddened parents continued on their journey.

Still standing in the heart of Boonville is a tree credited with starting the School of Journalism at the University of Missouri-Columbia, Judge Williams said. And he should know, for the famous Walter Williams, who founded the school, was his uncle. As a young teenager Williams was about to go to work in a blacksmith shop. He wasn't too sure that was what he wanted to do, so he was leaning against that big tree thinking it over when he became interested in what was going on in the print shop nearby. He forgot all about the other job and applied for a job in the print shop. There was little pay and the hours were long, but the youngster liked it. He became a printer and went on in journalistic work until he founded a school to train other students in the work he so loved.

Judge Roy D. Williams was born in Boonville as was his father, William Muir Williams, one of the outstanding lawyers of his day and justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri.

Old Franklin is so near Boonville that the people of Boonville feel its unusual history should be included with theirs. It was laid out in 1816.

Boonville Recalls Era

Thespian Hall

Thespian Hall, now the Lyric Theater in Boonville, was built in 1857 by the Thespian Society, a frontier dramatic organization. It is the oldest surviving and was called the Metropolis of the West. It had the first "Institute of Learning" and the first Masonic Lodge west of St. Charles, and the first newspaper west of St. Louis. It was the eastern terminus of the Santa Fe Trail and the boyhood home of Kit Carson. This town, with a population of several thousand people, was destroyed by high water in 1823.

Probably the most amazing garden ever developed west of the Mississippi was the John Hardeman garden, west of Old Franklin. It was established about 1815, and existed over 20 years. There was a mystery about John Hardeman, whose past was even a secret from his family. Fanciful stories were told of his earlier life which he either admitted nor denied. But he created this magnificent formal garden with perfectly kept shell paths, in the midst of a virgin forest. It was here that he experimented with new shrubs, plants, and trees.

There were trees in the garden 95 feet tall and one sycamore 45 feet in circumference. Hardeman would disappear for a period of time, but following the trips there would be large shipments of plants and shrubs from foreign countries. This extraordinary botanical garden brought curious pioneers, who by-passed the Santa Fe Trail to visit this beauty spot and wrote thousands of letters all over the country about this superb garden.

Covered By Flood

Although the ground on which the garden was situated had never been flooded, a large part of the land went down the river in 1826. Another large section was torn away a few years later and by 1837, when the river changed its course, there was only a small part left. Hardeman died in 1829 in New Orleans.

Boonville has proudly kept its historical heritage through its beautiful old buildings and homes, such as Forest Hill, the

Thomas Nelson mansion built in 1843 where George Caleb Bingham was a frequent visitor and painted several of his famous pictures. Then at 745 Main Street was the home of Sen. George G. Vest at the time of the Civil War. Vest, who played quite a part in the early history in Central Missouri, was the author of the famous "Eulogy to a Dog."

Located on a bluff above the Missouri River is Harley Park, which has been a public park for more than 75 years. Here may be seen Indian mounds, and this, too, was a spot for Santa Fe Trail trains in the early days.

But in preserving the history of the town, Boonville has not closed the door on the future. It is an alert, moving town that combines its heritage with its dreams, that goes forward in expansion while still walking closely in the footsteps of its ancestors. It does not tear down the things that have made it one of Missouri's most historic cities, it builds around them.

Sorosis Hears Talk By Dr. Jane Berry

"Women are their own worst enemies," Dr. Jane Berry, Shawnee Mission, Kan., told Sorosis members Monday afternoon at Heard Memorial Club House. Dr. Berry, director of continuing education for women, spoke on "Frontiers and Opportunities for 1970." She pointed out one reason for her statement by quoting what is often said by women: "I wouldn't work for a woman." Yet, Dr. Berry commented, there are many women who are wonderful bosses and are easy to work for.

Speaking on women's roles and social changes, Dr. Berry stated that the frontiers of the future are basically in five areas: 1) home and family 2) education 3) employment 4) community, and 5) personal development.

The most important change will be attitude, with different patterns of expectation, she said, noting that women today are in every type of work. The attitude now is acceptance of working women, she said, but there is a need for more part time opportunities.

Jobs that can be split between two women, each working part of the day, or each working certain days of the week are needed, she said. Part time work during peak periods in offices and industries would be another possibility, she noted.

Most women work until they start a family, she said, and some work after they have families and they often criticize each other. Those who stay home think those who work or those who are active in club and civic work are wrong and wonder how they can take care of their homes and families, she said.

Club women think that women who stay home stay there too much, Dr. Berry noted, and those who have gone to work shouldn't be working. The ones working think women who stay home or women who do club work are not doing what they should, but each, Dr. Berry stressed, has a different pattern which is right for them and might not be right for others.

The pattern for teenagers or those in their early twenties is different, she said, because they are more honest and look at things differently. They have more patterns for life, more education, and television has provided them with knowledge all over the world, Dr. Berry noted.

Divorce is quite common today and many times one parent has been successful in raising children if divorce is necessary, she stated, because one parent usually has more influence on the family, and in many states today single persons are allowed to adopt children.

Education is expanding and people from 16 to 86 may be seen on campuses today, she noted. This is typical, she remarked, and once you could tell the difference in ages by the mode of dress but today, she said, the only way you can tell the difference is by the wrinkles.

Personal development was once thought to be sinful by the early strict religious people, she noted, but today it is for improvement of soul, mind and body.

Our biggest frontier is attitude but the five basic areas still fit together, Dr. Berry said. Things are different for there is social change, she commented, and there must be a change in our thinking. It is necessary for everyone to find their own pattern and there are more options on opportunities, she noted.

Dr. Berry was introduced by Mrs. Forrest Drake, civics chairman. Mrs. William E. Hurlbut presided at the meeting.

Mrs. Donald Callis announced the Feb. 2 program will feature a book review by Mrs. Raymond W. Gepford, Kansas City.

Fire Damages Plant

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A fire early today damaged a portion of the Ford Motor Co.'s assembly plant in suburban Hazelwood.

G. M. Crittenden, industrial relations manager for the plant which turns out Ford's Mercury cars, said only a cleanup crew was on duty when the fire broke out and no one was injured.

The blaze erupted in "a final spray painting booth," Crittenden said, and was confined to the booth and the oven area when the paint is baked onto the autos.

Crittenden said the fire was completely extinguished by 4:30 a.m. but the cause and amount of damage remain undetermined.

Crittenden said both day and evening shifts, a total of more than 3,000 persons, were being advised not to report for work today.

Note Rise In Thefts Of Autos

A notable rise in auto thefts and a decline in burglaries and petty larcenies are reflected in the year-end report of the Sedalia Police Department.

Auto thefts 49 last year, compared to 21 in 1968. Forty stolen cars were recovered last year, compared to 16 the year before.

There were 109 petty larceny reports last year, down from the 156 total in 1968. Home burglaries were down to 45 in 1969 from the 75 committed in 1968. For businesses the 1969 figure is 55, compared to 71 in 1968.

Attempted burglaries of both homes and businesses were up last year over 1968, however.

The police record in solving burglaries was better last year, with 27 percent solved compared to less than 20 percent in 1968.

Strong-arm robbery saw an upsurge in 1969, with 13 cases reported, compared to five in 1968.

Drunks, a growing headache for the police, rose from 188 cases filed in police court in 1968 to 263 last year.

Total fines collected in 1969 stood at $34,211.18, an increase of $3,946.11 over 1968.

Stolen and lost property recovered and returned to owners totaled $57,171.58 last year, compared to $29,512.16 in 1968.

Maryville Fire Proves Costly

MARYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Fire destroyed two business buildings and heavily damaged three other structures in downtown Maryville Tuesday afternoon.

Officials said the blaze started in an appliance store and spread to a stationery company. Both two-story buildings were destroyed. A nearby bank, shoe store and insurance office suffered extensive damage.

Firemen from six towns battled the flames for more than three hours in near zero degree weather before gaining control.

Mrs. Ron Goff, owner of the appliance store, said she noticed a small fire under a work bench and as she started to ward it, it seemed to explode.

Four or five persons in the building escaped unharmed and there were no injuries reported.

Cause of the fire and the loss were not determined.

Maryville, a town of about 8,000, is in extreme Northwestern Missouri.

Street Work Done in '69 Is Reported

A year-end report of Street Department work, released at the City Council meeting Monday night, disclosed that more than 16 miles of improvements were made on Sedalia streets in 1969.

The report, prepared by public works director R. W. Cunningham and street superintendent Vernon Ditton, gave a detailed description of all work done by the Street Department in the past year.

In addition to the improvements, the department hauled 95 truck loads of dead trees and branches blown into streets, removed 4,195 cubic yards of snow and swept 2,990 miles of gutter on paved streets.

Among other duties performed by the department last year were the removal of 16 dilapidated houses and the clearing of 20 vacant lots.

The street department worked with a budget of $216,333 in 1969.

"Red Mass," named for the color of the vestments worn by the officiating priest, is celebrated annually to ask God's blessings on the administration of justice in the United States. It began in this country about 1923.

"Walk a Mile in My Shoes..." That's the title and the principal refrain of a popular song recently recorded by Joe South, a singer and guitarist in the soul, folk-rock field. There's a good deal to learn from those six words.

Music today, especially in the popular field, often offers those who care to listen closely enough many thoughts, ideas and hopes, and could be called music with a message.

Many surveys say that teenagers don't really listen to the words of a song — it's the beat and the melody that catch their attention. However, I for one, and I believe many others who really listen to popular music, can't help but notice the lyrics, especially when they're like those mentioned above.

Consider those words quoted years, but during the past two years it has been revived. Mrs. Schulz credits the scouting program's revitalization to the summer day camp for Warsaw Girl Scouts.

Mrs. Schulz was a Girl Scout for six years, serving offices within Troop 90, Old Trails' Council. She is now serving her second year as a Brownie leader in the Warsaw Girl Scout program.

Mrs. Schulz is married to an English teacher at Warsaw High School and they are the parents of a daughter, age 2.

at the top of this column. They're saying, "Put yourself in my place." Another phrase of that song goes, "Before you accuse, criticize and abuse..." In other words, think about the other fellow.

The next time you're ready to blow your top over something done by the telephone operator, milkman, sales clerk, your hairdresser, your boss, your employees or your next door neighbor, put yourself in their place — think about the disappointments, hardships or problems they may have had. Perhaps they have a good reason for being cross and out of sorts with everyone in general, not just you in particular.

No one is perfect, and to live by those words to the letter would be impossible. But, if those words would come to mind just half of the time, think of the friendships you could make and save; think of the hurt feelings that could be avoided, or easily forgiven and forgotten.

Someone once said that no matter how bad off you think you are, there is always someone in this world who has it a lot worse. When you really feel like giving up, think about that, and perhaps your problems will seem easier to bear, if not easier to solve.

We are moving right along into the new year, although a new decade with all the unknown possibilities and events it will bring us still lies ahead. If all of us could adopt that song as our personal criterion toward our fellow men, perhaps 1970 could and would bring us a better world, or even a better town or neighborhood. Maybe it would just make each of us a better person.

If you aren't familiar with this song, or if you have never really listened to the lyrics, tune in one of the popular radio shows, or purchase a copy of the record and lend an ear.

To me, the voice of Joe South has a haunting, down-to-earth quality, the music is moving, the words and tune are mind-stickers, and the background chorus is toe-tapping, almost gospel. It's a tune that will stick with you and the words will keep coming back —

"Walk a mile in my shoes, Walk a mile in my shoes, Before you accuse, criticize and abuse, Walk a mile in my shoes."

Next week, Powder Line will originate from the typewriter of Ginger Moore, The Sedalia Democrat-Capital's new society editor.
